

PRESIDENT VEToes FARM BILL AGAIN

COOLIDGE PLAN FOR FARM BILL EFFECTS DRIVE

Members from Agricultural Regions Want Measure Passed as Election Nears

HOUSE AGAINST FEE

Cal Proposes to Approve Bill if Congress Will Remove Equalization Section

Washington—President Coolidge's maneuver on the McNary-Haugen bill—his proposal that once the bill is voted congress shall eliminate the equalization fee and then he will sign it—will have an important effect on the national campaign.

Mr. Coolidge knows that there was a substantial sentiment in the house for passage of the McNary-Haugen bill without the equalization fee and that it is too late in the session to frame any compromise measure. In other words, he will in effect ask congress either to give him a chance to sign the McNary-Haugen bill without the equalization fee or there will be no farm legislation at all, a circumstance not welcomed by members from the agricultural regions.

To refuse to give the McNary-Haugen bill right of way once it is vetoed so that a measure without the equalization fee can be sent to the White House would mean that the sponsors of the equalization fee consider it important enough to make an issue by itself.

DIVISION OF OPINION

The friends of the measure have always insisted that the equalization fee was the heart of it but in the house this time there was a division of opinion and as finally brought in from committee the equalization fee was authorized to operate only as an alternative in the event that the other machinery in the bill proved unsuccessful.

The general impression has been that if the system of marketing the surplus provided in the bill did not succeed the federal farm board, created by the measure, would hesitate to apply the fee. In any event the fee has not the strong position it had two years ago and this is unquestionably due to the present persistent opposition and the knowledge that some compromise was necessary if farm legislation of any kind were to be passed.

Mr. Coolidge is pressing his advantage. He is ready to accept the whole McNary-Haugen bill without the equalization fee—something that he has never indicated before. Members from agricultural regions now have by their votes made their record—they did everything possible to get the equalization fee through but the president was obstinate. Undoubtedly a record vote will be taken to see how there are enough to pass the bill over the veto, failing which the vote without the equalization fee will be urged. It is possible for the measure to be lost in the parliamentary maze that precedes the adjournment of congress. A small group of members who are in favor of the bill and who will be an advantage to them in squelch efforts to revive the McNary-Haugen bill once it is vetoed.

Farm organizations, however, which want something rather than nothing will doubtless exert their influence to have the bill amended to suit the president's objections.

Politically the incident is of major importance because if the McNary-Haugen bill without an equalization fee is passed the friends of the administration will be able to say on the bill works first before discussing the value of the equalization fee and that a start will have been made toward organizing the machinery of farm relief. It will be argued that it would have taken some time before the equalization fee could be put into effect anyhow and that the political effect of setting up the machinery and then determining whether to use the equalization fee. Anyway, it would tend to eliminate the issue from the campaign of most members of congress and that will get many votes for the administration. If the bill without the equalization fee does come to a vote it will be passed by a substantial margin.

AIDS G. O. P. CAUSE

Should Mr. Coolidge eliminate the McNary-Haugen issue he will take away the principal argument against his administration, that the middle west has had and will have either the draft movement or the candidacy of Secretary Hoover.

COOLIDGE SIGNS BILL FOR MERCHANT MARINE

Washington—President Coolidge has signed the Jones-White merchant marine bill.

The measure, which was sent to the White House in the same envelope with the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, authorizes a big replacement program for the government merchant marine, requires sanction of at five of the seven members of the shipping board for the sale of vessels to private operators, doubles the existing $125,000 construction loan fund of the board, and liberalizes the ocean contract mail system.

STORMY SESSIONS MARK TEXAS CONVENTIONS

IN BUSINESS

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, the lone eagle of the Atlantic, has returned to the business world once more. The former air mail pilot, who was engaged for a full time job as chairman of the technical board of the Transcontinental Airways Co., Inc., a concern that will span the nation from New York to the Pacific coast by plane and railroads combined.

ITALIA LEAVES FOR FLIGHT TO POLAR REGIONS

General Nobile Hopes to Land at North Pole Itself on Third Expedition

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen—The dirigible Italia started northward at 4:40 Wednesday morning across the Polar ice cap with the North Pole, some 750 miles away, as its objective.

General Umberto Nobile, commander of the expedition, hoped to land at the pole itself to make explanations and to plant a cross given him by Pope Pius.

This cross was blessed and kissed by Father Safranoch, the priest of the expedition, just before the start was made. The crew of the Italia witnessed the ceremony.

General Nobile had hoped to get away on this third trip over Polar regions just before midnight. He was delayed because of the necessity of making a few minor repairs.

The present expedition is expected to last from 30 to 40 hours. On May 11, General Nobile made his first attempt to penetrate into polar regions in the Italia but returned to Kings Bay after seven hours because of bad weather conditions.

On May 12, he started a flight to Lenin land, returning to Kings Bay on May 18 after a flight of 68 hours without seeing any new land.

General Nobile on his present trip is accompanied by a number of scientists and plans to make studies of temperatures, prevalent winds, climatic conditions, magnetic compass variations and other phenomena.

If the weather at the pole permits General Nobile plans to land several members of his party there to conduct various investigations.

Two neighbors saw a car stop near the Powell home and two men emerge. One of them carried a package under his arm. The pair ran to the Powell home, returned to their car and sped away just as the bomb exploded, the witnesses said.

Police believe the bombing may be traced to bootleggers. Powell, who is serving his third term as district attorney, has been a militant foe of bootlegging interests in Kenosha since Jan. 1, he has instituted padlocking proceedings against 20 saloons and roadhouses.

Last summer it was recalled, he personally led raids on bootlegging places in Somers township. Following this campaign Powell received four letters warning him to cease his

LINDY ENTERS COMMERCE AIR ROUTE SERVICE

Takes Full-time Job as Technical Chairman of New York to Pacific Flight

New York—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh has decided to enter the commercial airplane field and has accepted a "full time job" as chairman of the technical committee of the recently formed Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc.

He is to assume his post at once and will take charge of putting into operation the rail and plane service between New York and the Pacific coast which the Pennsylvania railroad, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, the Curtiss Airplane and Motor Corporation and the National Air Transport, Inc., cooperated in forming.

It is a "full time job" and it is believed any plans the colonel might have had for further "good will flying" would be cancelled, at least for the present.

The announcement said that Colonel Lindbergh would have supervision over "all matters concerning choice of equipment, fields, general service, flying routes and safety appliances."

Associated with him on the technical committee will be four aviators, not yet selected, but who will be men of "long experience and proved ability."

Efforts to obtain the services of Lindbergh for the new company have been made repeatedly.

The Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., has been incorporated for $5,000,000 and plans a combined rail and plane service by which passengers will fly during the daytime and make the night journeys over the mountains by train.

The date of commencement of the new service will depend on the work of Colonel Lindbergh and his committee and the speed with which it selects the planes to be used, completes details of the route, flying schedules and landing fields.

53 DIE IN DISASTERS ON TWO RUSSIAN BOATS

Moscow—The death toll of two Russian ship disasters Wednesday stood at fifty-three.

A stream launch on the river Kuban carrying eighty children capsized at Tomruky. Thirty-four children were drowned.

Nineteen persons died in a fire on the steamer Leo Tolstoy which was tied to a dock in the Dnieper river near Petrovsk. The victims were first and second class passengers, the third class travellers managing to escape.

The crew of the Leo Tolstoy, with the exception of the captain and two sailors, were arrested Wednesday charged with leaping into the water from the ship as soon as they caught sight of the fire instead of making an effort to save the passengers.

PROMINENT UTILITY LEADER DEAD IN WEST

Army Flyer Sets Record In Journey

Makes Longest Dawn-to-dusk Flight from Buffalo to Galveston, 1,500 Miles

Galveston, Tex.—Lieut. William R. Sweezy Wednesday was honored by army officers here to have set a new American record for a dawn-to-dusk flight in a service plane.

Flying a new Curtiss Falcon A-3 ship with a 12-cylinder, 400-horsepower motor, Lieut. Sweezy covered approximately 1,500 miles from Buffalo, N. Y., to Galveston in 13 hours and 25 minutes. He stopped for fuel at Louisville and Memphis. He left Buffalo at 3:15 A. M. (Central Standard Time) and arrived here at 4:40 P. M.

He said he was favored by a tail wind on most of his route from the northern boundary of the country to the Gulf of Mexico. Lieut. Sweezy is a member of the Third Attack Group, stationed at Fort Crockett here.

In advancing a claim for a record for Sweezy, officers at Fort Crockett said his flight was longer than any dawn-to-dusk hop of which any record was available here.

ST. LOUIS-CHICAGO AIR SERVICE STARTED

St. Louis—Inauguration of a twice-a-day passenger service between St. Louis and Chicago, and later establishment of routes to Omaha and the Mexican border, was announced by the Robertson Aircraft Corporation.

With four fourteen passenger all metal tri-motored airplanes ordered, the corporation, which has expanded its capitalization to a million dollars, expects to start the Chicago service about August 1.

The service to Omaha will start as soon as the air mail route can be lighted, probably six months hence. Negotiations are also going forward to establish a line to Dallas, Tex., and the border, and the company hopes later to establish a line to Mexico City. Arnold Sudd, who will head the company, said.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh has been invited to join the directorate of the company, for which he once worked as a test pilot and later as a mail pilot.

G. O. P. PICKS TWO COMPLETE STATE SLATES

Uninstructed Group Will Carry Battle to Floor of National Convention

Dallas, Tex.—The fight for control of Texas delegations to the national conventions of the two major parties continued Wednesday with two rival Republican contingents seeking seats at Kansas City where the Democrats opened the second day of their state convention at Beaumont.

After a stormy session here Tuesday, the Republican faction headed by R. B. Creager, national committee man, instructed 25 elected delegates and four delegates at large for Herbert Hoover. This action followed an argument between Creager forces and a group headed by C. C. Littleton of Fort Worth, and Harry M. Wurzbach, only Republican representative from Texas. The latter faction demanded an uninstructed delegation.

When the argument was at its height, someone threw an ink well through a plate glass door and Littleton was arrested. He quickly made bond and the Littleton-Wurzbach faction assembled in a separate convention, named four delegates at large and announced they would carry their fight for recognition to the Republican national convention.

MOODY LEADS DEMOCRATS

In the skirmishing for control of the 40 Texas Democratic delegates, the so-called "Harmony" group, led by Governor Dan Moody, gained control of the state convention at Beaumont through a coalition with a minority faction favoring the candidacy of Governor Smith of New York.

One of the first tests of the strength of the coalition of Harmony and Smith factions came when W. L. Ferguson, author of the Texas prohibition law, was named temporary chairman of the convention. The vote was 57 1/2 for Dean and 180 2-3 for V. A. Collins, Dallas, candidate of the "constitutional" or bone dry faction.

E. A. Berry, Houston, nominated by former governor James W. Ferguson, as a supporter of Smith, received 16 1/2 votes.

While the constitutional faction seeks a dry candidate and a prohibition plank, they are against Smith. They charge the harmony group is playing into the hands of the Smith forces by the rule the 40 delegates would be bound to support the New York governor should he be nominated.

While the Smith group expressed satisfaction with the initial test of strength they received little encouragement from Dean in his keynote address. He scored the New York governor as "a finished product of Tammany hall, the last word in the spoils system, and unfit to lead the nation's Democracy."

Dean said, however, that regardless of his opposition to Smith, he would support him if he should become the party nominee.

PLANES CAUSE REIGN OF TERROR TO FOXES

Wisconsin Rapids—(AP)—A new terror has come into the lives of foxes at the Northland Silver Fox farm with the increasing popularity of aviation and the lives of the young are threatened with extinction through the destruction of their mothers by planes flying low over the young foxes.

It has been a death shadow that planes flying low over the farm have cast upon the lives of young foxes, according to the proprietors. Terror aroused in the mothers by the airplanes, the proprietors said, cause the foxes to protect their young in the way that is instinctive to them. Alertness on the part of caretakers is required to rescue the young from the misdirected maternal care.

The proprietors said that recently when planes flew over the ranch no less than six mother foxes were seen to bury their young.

RECOVER 161 BODIES

Mather, Pa.—(AP)—The bodies of 161 victims of the Mather mine disaster had been recovered from the explosion-swept workings up to Wednesday, as rescue men continued their search for 33 missing men. One hundred and fifty-two of the bodies were identified, five unidentified and seven held at the bottom of the main shaft to be brought to the surface later.

Rescue work was slowed up to a great extent when rescue men were affected by odors in the underground workings. Many of the bodies recovered were decomposed.

CAT CHASES BIRDS, KENOSHA DARKENED BY SHORT CIRCUIT

Machine—(AP)—A cat with a penchant for sparrows extinguished all lights and cut off all electric power in Kenosha, Kenosha and Sturtevant for a full minute Tuesday night.

Lights went out, street cars stopped, and citizens wondered what had happened until emergency equipment was put into use.

Investigation disclosed that the cat, climbing up the side of the building to reach some sparrows' nests, had caused a short circuit by standing on an oil switch and touching a bushing. Twenty thousand volts went through the cat.

Incidentally, kitty caused several thousand dollars' damage to equipment.

HENRY SCHABO HURT IN AUTO COLLISION

Injuries Received When Car Crashes Headon into Moving Van May Prove Fatal

Henry Schabo, 60, 115 E. Summer-st., is reported to be near death in St. Elizabeth hospital as the result of an accident about 11 o'clock Wednesday morning on Highway 10 a mile west of the city limits when the car he was driving collided with a heavy moving van belonging to the Wolf and Pepper Transfer company of Eau Claire.

E. D. Dickens, Jr., driver of the truck, received a scalp wound and his father, E. D. Dickens, Sr., who was riding in the truck with his son, received minor injuries. The younger Mr. Dickens was taken to St. Elizabeth hospital but, released a short time later.

Witnesses said Mr. Schabo on his way to the Greinke sand pit a short distance away, had turned to the left side of the road to pass the car of John Froede, a mailman, who had stopped to place some mail in the box of Henry Bast.

As he reached the left side of the road the heavy truck collided headon with his machine and Schabo's car was carried 40 or 50 feet. Pieces of the smaller machine were strewn along the road. The truck then went into the ditch and turned on its side. The front end of the truck was damaged and Schabo's car is a complete wreck.

Mr. Schabo, a son of the injured man, was driving a truck in the rear of his father's car and saw the accident.

Mr. Schabo suffered nine broken ribs and a broken arm, his left lung was punctured, he has several deep lacerations on his head and his left side badly cut. Attending physicians hold little hope for his recovery.

MEREDITH NAMES G. O. P. COMMITTEE

Group Chosen to Appoint Chairman to Succeed A. B. Fontaine

Milwaukee—(AP)—George S. Meredith, acting chairman of the state Republican executive committee Wednesday announced the appointment of a committee to select a chairman to succeed A. B. Fontaine, Green Bay, resigned.

Call for a meeting of the committee will be made at once by the acting chairman. County conventions to select delegates to the Green Bay regular Republican convention, June 26, will be called within a short time. E. O. Wiperman, secretary, announced.

In the city of Milwaukee it is planned to hold meetings in each of the twenty-five wards. But in the other 20 counties the delegates will be named at county meetings.

The vote cast for President Coolidge in the 1924 election will be the basis on which delegates will be apportioned to the Green Bay session.

STILL OPPOSES SURPLUS CROP CONTROL FEES

Equalization Fee Called Prejudicial to Sound Public Policy, Agriculture

SECOND DISAPPROVAL

Little Hope for Farm Relief This Session Unless Fee Machinery Is Removed

Washington—(AP)—President Coolidge Wednesday vetoed the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill.

Thus for the second time in as many years Mr. Coolidge has disapproved a farm plan embodying the equalization fee machinery for surplus crops control.

While there will be any farm relief enacted this session, now is not the time to pass the bill to the senate. It may pass the bill without the equalization fee, in the hope of winning presidential favor, or attempt enactment of the measure as it stands by overriding Mr. Coolidge's veto.

There is much doubt that the latter course would prove successful. The president vetoes the bill on the grounds of constitutionality and because the "so-called equalization fee and other features of the old measure are still prejudicial in my opinion to sound public policy and to agriculture."

The veto draws the line between the president and the farm group in congress more tightly than it ever has been before, unless some further action is taken at the capitol, will place the agricultural question before coming presidential conventions as an outstanding controversy.

Frank O. Lowden is one of the bill's most outspoken champions. The president favors it and Senator Charles McNary, who favored it for Watson, of Indiana, have voted for it.

Secretary Hoover has been regarded as standing with the president on farm relief.

Two thirds vote would have to muster Mr. Coolidge's veto. This session the senate passed it by a vote of 52 to 22, or slightly more than the necessary two thirds. In the house the measure was approved 201 to 121, or slightly less than the necessary two thirds.

EFFECT ON ELECTIONS

Its consideration in both houses was enlivened by a discussion of its possible effect on the forthcoming presidential campaign, the names of Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, and Vice President Dawes, who favored it, frequently being injected into the debate.

Mr. Coolidge said in his veto message that this year's McNary-Haugen bill is in some respect an improvement over the one he vetoed last year but it contains provisions "new and highly objectionable provisions."

The bill, he said, "essentially consisted of stimulation of the price of agricultural commodities and products thereof by artificially controlling the surpluses so that there will be an apparent scarcity on the market."

Mr. Coolidge wrote a twelve-page printed pamphlet outlining his objections to the bill.

The objections of the president were summarized by him under these six headings:

First, its attempted price fixing policy; second, the tax characteristics of the equalization fee; third, the widespread bureaucracy which it would set up; fourth, its encouragement to profiteering and wasteful distribution by middlemen; fifth, its stimulation of overproduction; sixth, its aid to our foreign agricultural competitors.

In addition, he declared that "these fallacies by no means exhaust the list of fallacious and, indeed, dangerous aspects of the bill, but they afford ample grounds for its emphatic rejection."

GIRL FIRES ON NEGRO AND HALTS BURGLARY

East Chicago, Ind.—(AP)—A twenty-year old girl, Margaret Rappa, Wednesday night shot the burglar of a Negro to loot the Twin City Lumber Co. here when she fired at him as he attacked her father, John Rappa, 65. Although carrying a pistol, the Negro fled before the girl's attack. He was taken to the Illinois Steel Company's plant in East Chicago. Fifty Chicago police men were sent to search for him.

The Negro was captured as he sought to repel a police attack with a pistol that had jammed. He was identified as Leroy Covington, 20. Covington was shot in both hands by police marksmen.

THREATEN TO SHIP BY TRUCK TO CUT PRICES

Chicago—(AP)—The threat of truck shipping to avoid high railroad freight rates was heard again at an Interstate Commerce commission hearing when two Sheboygan Wis. furniture manufacturers uttered it.

E. W. Schultz, president of the Northfield Company, said increases in rail rates would force their companies to do virtually all their shipping by truck. The men appeared as witnesses at a furniture rate hearing, a part of the congressional investigation ordered by the Heck-Smith resolution.

Last Minute Bulletins

Bellevue—(AP)—The "Opel Rocket" propelled forward by the explosion of rockets placed in the rear of the machine, was demonstrated for the first time on the Axis speedway Wednesday, attaining a speed variously estimated at 100 miles an hour.

The car started with a terrific roar emitting a sheet of flame and a cloud of yellow smoke as the successive rockets exploded. The machine gained momentum as one rocket after another, all of uniform power, was set off, the car taking a lunge forward every time a fresh rocket exploded.

Washington—(AP)—The vetoed McNary-Haugen farm relief bill was laid aside by the senate Wednesday night Thursday at the request of Senator Norbeck, Republican, Oregon. Senator Norbeck, Republican, South Dakota, expressed the hope that a vote to override the veto would be taken Thursday.

Tokyo—(AP)—Violent fighting at the city of Hoken, important strategic point 100 miles south of Peking was reported in advices from Chihli Wednesday the Nationalists finally being driven to the south with the Northern Shantung army in pursuit.

New York—(AP)—John E. Berwind, president of the Archer Coal Deposit Co., and vice president of the Herk wind-White Coal Mining Co., died suddenly of heart failure at his Park Avenue home Tuesday night.

SEES DAUGHTER HIT BY CAR BEFORE HOME

Merrill—(AP)—A mother watched anxiously from a window of her home Tuesday night for her daughter to return from an errand and saw an automobile swerve into a ditch turn back into the road and drive away.

When the child, Eva King, 12 years old, did not return the father, Eric King, went out to search for her and found her body with a fractured skull and both legs broken, lying at the side of the road. She had been struck by a car in front of her home.

The mother then told of having seen the car with two young men driving away and a search for them was being made Wednesday.

The body of the girl had been carried 25 feet.

MUSICAL PROGRAM BY STUDENTS, BAND AT PARK PAVILION

Dancers and Presentation of Pageant Scheduled for Tonight at Pierce Park

A special musical program, using the new pavilion at Pierce park for the first time, will be given at 8 o'clock Thursday night when two hundred junior high school girls, the Field Artillery band and a group of dancers from the Bannister studios will take part in the musical presentation.

"The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," given as a part of the musical clinic last Friday night at Lawrence Memorial chapel, will be sung again, this time in its entirety. Although the cantata cannot be dramatized because of lack of space, the girls will appear in the colorful Dutch costumes of the period and place. The story of Ichabod's wild race with the headless horseman adapts itself well to an out door production.

Girls from the Roosevelt, Wilson and McKinley Junior high schools will sing the cantata, under the direction of Dr. Earl L. Baker and Miss Irene Bidwell. Miss Bidwell and Miss Mildred Evans will play the piano, accompanying the cantata and the Field Artillery band, under the direction of E. F. Mumm, also will accompany the score.

The band will play incidental music and a short concert after the performance and also will play for the group of dancers from the Bannister studios who will conclude the program. Special lighting effects have been secured for the cantata and li-brettos will be provided for the audience. There will be no admission charge.

No Need To Go South For Tuberculosis Treatment

Madison—(P)—Persons suffering from tuberculosis can be cured just as well in Wisconsin as in Arizona or Colorado, according to Dr. C. A. Harper, Wisconsin state health officer.

"Climate is often over-estimated as an important factor in the cure of tuberculosis," he declared. "Usually the chances for recovery are better close at home, and the treatment is more accessible and less expensive."

Dr. Harper points out that the plan of state-wide county sanatoria has become exceedingly popular. Under this system the state refunds to the county $7 weekly for each tuberculosis patient cared for at county expense. Residents are expected to pay their own cost of maintenance if able to do so.

Counties with sanatoria include Ashland, Bayfield, Iron, Brown, Eau Claire, Jefferson, Kenosha, La Crosse, Manitowish, Marathon, Milwaukee, Outagamie, Racine, Sheboygan, Waushara, Winnebago, Fond du Lac, and Waubesa. In addition there is a state sanatorium at Stoughton, a state camp for convalescents at Tomahawk lake, an institution for tubercular insane at Superior, an endowed sanatorium at Madison, and a private institution at Stevens Point.

"The ideal place to cure tuberculosis is where all the machinery and equipment are provided. This obvious is not the home," Dr. Harper said. Elaborating on this idea he shows that the patient is often tempted to do things contrary to his best interests when he is at home. He may join in an outing when he should be in bed, or he may allow the window to be closed when someone objects to the abundance of fresh air which is essential to his recovery.

Sanatoria are necessary, Dr. Harper said, to protect the patient from his own folly and the advice of friends. In addition better facilities are provided for the three simple requirements, fresh air, rest, and wholesome food.

Another important function of such institutions is to teach the patient to care for himself when he returns home, and how to protect others from the disease.

Thoughts Of Campfires, Beefsteaks, Excite Kids

"Mmm—kiddoo — didn't we have fun." The two small girls sitting in the office of Agnes C. Vanneman in the Appleton Woman's club did not see the hot concrete, the street car track and automobiles through the window. They say a cool lake with beefsteak fried out-of-doors, snap turtles, camp fires—they saw Camp Onaway. Old folks are not the only ones who indulge in do-you-remember fests. The youthful campers, as balm to their itch of anticipation for tent days, soothed themselves with reminiscence. There was the time the camp held the play in which the cook mock-married the brawny life guard. And the time after that when she divorced him and he sat by the campfire with the wood smoke drawing real tears out of his eyes and down his cheeks, while his child, the chore boy, dressed in half socks and a too small straw hat, bawled lustily as he clutched his lollypop.

Meals were fun. Between four helpings of spaghetti or pie or special cake they would serenade the councilors until the popular people would either have to duck from the publicity or half rise and give a hurried bow. The spats in the tents were continuous but enjoyable. They fought with spirit but when one member of the free-for-all was suddenly called home by her parents her whole tent burst into tears and one little girl cried the whole afternoon and through the dinner hour.

The morning classes were not like real classes. You walked around and talked, according to the little girls, and learned about interesting things like nature study, and fancy work in the bargain. The excursions to nearby islands were just for those who had passed the deep water test. One time, with the life guard, they set out in flatboats for their destination and got there in shifts. Quick change artistry was the joy of it. To shoot the young rapids that is nearby is the joy of every girl who gets out of it the same honest-to-goodness thrill Indians or Oliver Curwood heroes got from the process, but none of the dangers.

The person who takes a cold shower every morning has no right to act snuffy if a member of the Onaway group is around. According to the little girls one of the greatest joys of the outing was the before breakfast dip. "You always felt so fresh after 'em, gee," she said. After the dip came flag raising and to reach this ceremony on time the lazy members put their necks to a greater risk than the ever did in somersaulting or diving.

Miss Agnes Vanneman announced that practically all the tents are already spoken for and warns those girls who have reserved places but have not yet registered to do so as quickly as possible if they expect to make the quota which allows only seventy-five children.

AWARD WINNERS PLAN TO ATTEND COLLEGE IN FALL

Alysius Gage, winner of the craftsmanship shield, award presented by the Appleton high school faculty at the annual class day exercises Tuesday, and Chester Johnston, awarded the American legion medal, expect to seek laurels in institutions of higher learning next year, according to announcements made Wednesday.

Gage was presented with the shield by H. H. Heible, principal of the high school, in recognition of his excellence in scholarship, leadership, character and service. Johnston was awarded the Legion medal by George Dame, representing the American legion, for excellent participation in the three major sports of the high school, football, basketball and track.

ANOTHER NECKING SPOT DUE TO PASS OUT OF EXISTENCE

One of the few "lovers' lanes" in Appleton will pass out of existence soon if the suggestion of several employees of the Inter-lakes Pulp and Paper company to the city council is carried out. A petition was presented at the council meeting Wednesday evening asking that a light or lights be placed on E. Newberry-st from John to Lawe-sts. The petition was presented to the street lighting committee.

If the committee acts favorably on the request, it will mean the passing of the street as a 'spooning' place for automobile parties. The street runs along the river between John-st and Lawe-st.

OPPOSITION-AWAITING LEADING CANDIDATES IN VIRGINIA PRIMARY

Hoover Vies With Goff and Reed With Smith as Day of Election Nears

Charleston, W. Va., (AP)—West Virginia's contests for presidential preference will be decided at the state primary May 29.

On the border line between the "solid south" and the "uncertain north" the state will become the battle ground for spirited clashes both in the republican and democratic parties. West Virginia has 19 votes in the republican convention and 16 in the Houston party party. These are the last republican delegates to be selected.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover again will come to grips with a "favorite son," entering the republican primary against Senator Guy D. Goff.

Senator James A. Reed of Missouri and Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York will compete for the endorsement of the democratic electors. Of prime interest also in the state is the three-cornered contest for the republican senatorial nomination, with Gov. Howard M. Gore, Dr. Henry D. Hatfield, a former governor, and former Rep. Benjamin L. Rosenbloom seeking that office. Senator M. M. Neely, democrat, is unopposed for the party nomination for re-election.

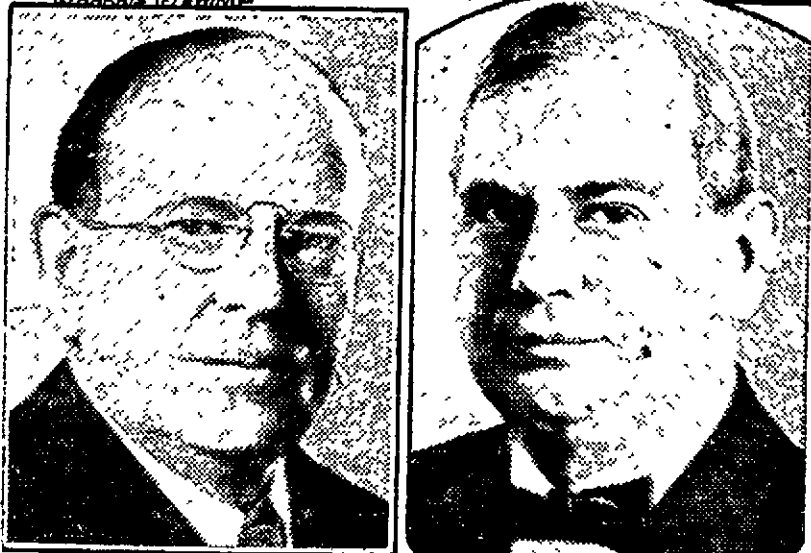

As leader of the Smith forces in West Virginia, C. W. Osenton, democratic national committeeman, entered the name of the New York executive in the primary as a defensive move to protect a slate of delegates pledged to his candidacy. While popular choice in West Virginia is not binding upon the delegates, Osenton said it carried a moral obligation, but that with Smith an active candidate, delegates for him would be "doubtly protected." The Reed forces did not file a slate of delegates pledged to the Missouri senator.

Filing of the Smith and Reed certificates developed a movement for an unpledged democratic delegation, and a score of candidates for delegate filed amendments to their declarations stating it was "obvious" that voters will have no "fair opportunity" to express their real choice for president, and announcing they would not feel bound to support anyone "who might appear to be the popular choice." Spokesmen for those delegates said their attitude was anti-Smith rather than in favor of any particular candidate.

Governor Gore joined the presidential and senatorial contests by endorsing the Hoover candidacy against that of Senator Goff. The governor, a former secretary of agriculture, said endorsement by the West Virginia voters of the commerce secretary would be "very pleasing" to him.

Both parties will nominate elective

IN WEST VIRGINIA RACE

GOLF BALL OF 1907 VINTAGE IS GOOD AS ARE NEW ONES

Last week while workmen were digging in a trench on the grounds they unearthed a ball which bore the date, April 11, 1907, a relic of the days when all balls were dated. The ball was made by the Renshall Manufacturing company and is livelier in its old age than many of the balls now used. The relic is on display at the golf course.

COUNCIL AT NEW LONDON CAN'T USE SCHOOL FUNDS

Funds raised by the New London board of education for erection of a high school are under direction and supervision of the board and the common council cannot use such money for general city purposes. Attorney General John Reynolds held last week in an opinion given to John N. Callahan, state superintendent of schools.

A resolution, adopted by the New London council in 1925 provided for an eight-mill tax for a sinking fund for a new high school building, the money to be invested by the city council. Mr. Callahan explained. This tax has been renewed annually. Attorney Reynolds ruled the money is under supervision of the board which has empowered the council to invest it only and that the council may not use it for any general city purposes.

CHICAGO CONTRACTOR GETS JOB OF LAYING PAVING AT NEENAH

Aldermen Told That Library Is in Bad Condition and Needs Repairs

Neenah — Final action was taken Tuesday evening by the city council on the work of paving with reinforced concrete, S. Commercial-st from Wisconsin-ave to Winneconne and then west on Winneconne-ave west to a point across the Soo line right of way. The contract was awarded at the meeting to the F. E. Coughlin company of Chicago, whose bid of $33,871.40 was the lowest.

Final reports of the Board of Public Works on assessments was made and bids were presented and accepted; resolutions assessing two-thirds of the cost to the abutting property owner and one-third to the city; resolution to award the contract to the Coughlin company and a resolution to issue bonds for the work except for those who will pay in advance for the annual installments of the debt which they desire to pay in that manner, were passed.

Since arrangements were made to pave S. Commercial-st from its intersection with Doty-ave, a valuer petition was circulated among the property owners in the block between Wisconsin-ave and Doty-ave, with the result that all except one signed. In order to give the one property owner, the Wisconsin Telephone company, a chance to get in, a motion was passed to have the city enter into contract with the Coughlin company to include this piece of pavement in its program and in the meantime secure the signature of the telephone company which has a frontage of 60 feet.

A petition asking that one-half of the road at Columbia park between Franklin and Columbia-ave be vacated to allow access to the property which abuts it on the west side, was granted.

Much discussion arose over the bad condition of the basement at the library, where it is understood, has been in such condition for some time and had not been reported until the last meeting of the council. The floor has given out, the furnace is of no further use and the waterworks system is not functioning. As the budget as adopted last fall did not contain funds for improvements, the library board advertised for bids for remodeling the conditions. It is estimated it will cost $2,850 to place the floor in condition and from $2,500 to $3,500 to install a new heating plant and plumbing.

The Casino hall and adjoining property on E. Doty-ave, has been condemned as a fire hazard and must be attended to at once. This was referred to the city attorney to add to the several other properties to be placed in sanitary condition or torn down.

The clerk was authorized to advertise for crushed stone and crushed gravel for road work as the Neenah quarry cannot produce the quantity needed. This led to a discussion of repairing streets by placing crushed stone thereon and on the gutters which would displace the permanent improvement of streets so treated, as the resurfacing with crushed stone is conducted at the city's expense.

A representative of the Eastern Wisconsin Light and Power company, which recently abandoned its street car service between Neenah and Fond du Lac, was present at the meeting and reported that all he would be authorized to do in putting the tracks in condition would be to fill them up.

This did not satisfy the city which passed a motion to have the rails taken out and the streets put in repair. The mayor reported that the Soo line crossing on Winneconne-ave, which was found to be one foot and four inches above the grade of the street, would be lowered to conform with the street grade which has been given for improvement by paving. The request was granted Tuesday morning at a meeting of the street committee and Soo line officials.

Attorney S. Spengler reported that the bill board question was one which could be acted upon by the police as a measure for safety and health and if the board being erected on Winneconne-ave was found to be a nuisance it could be ordered removed. A manhole to relieve a flood water at the Valley Inn was recommended placed.

Warn Against Cathartics In Cases Of Appendicitis

Madison — Appendicitis—that modern disease of civilization—is on the increase. Signs of it are so varied that it should be suspected in every case of stomach upset. The most dangerous procedure is to use a cathartic. It may stir latent factors of disease and make the case severe.

In these four sentences the educational committees of the State Medical Society of Wisconsin summarizes some of the movement for the increase of appendicitis in this country.

"Appendicitis is among the most dangerous of our common diseases and at the same time is one of the most responsible to proper treatment," declares the bulletin of the State Medical Society of Wisconsin.

"The appendix is a small, tubular, wormlike structure about the size of a lead pencil arising from the cecum or first part of the large bowel which lies in the lower right quadrant of the abdomen. Its opening is continuous with that of the large bowel and it is lined with the same type of mucous membrane. The appendix is sometimes called the tonsil of the abdomen because of the large amount of adenoid tissue found in its wall. It has no demonstrable function and is generally regarded as a now useless organ. As in other useless structures, the blood supply is poor."

"Since the appendix opens into the large bowel, it is constantly exposed to bacterial infection. Any accident, therefore, which might lower its resistance, as obstruction through lack of blood movement, spread of bacteria, linking by adhesions, or impairment of the blood supply, will give rise to appendicitis. The offending organisms are usually colon bacilli and pus cocci. As soon as infection takes place, swelling of the tissues occurs, and with the swelling the blood supply is slowly cut off, resulting frequently in gangrene. The appendix, if not removed, will then rupture and infection of the abdominal walls (peritonitis) will result. It is this complication that makes acute appendicitis a dangerous disease."

TAXES, LAND VALUES COME BEFORE EDITORS

Madison — (UP) — When Wisconsin editors of rural papers gather here Friday they will come, figuratively, without pencils.

Titles of Wisconsin land, taxes and land values, the land surveys, and livestock nutrition are to be discussed and demonstrated by prominent men of the state college of agriculture who have headed these experiments or practices.

The editors have been asked to come to the state school for an exchange of ideas and discussion and development of state betterment plans, and not as editors of weekly papers or farm papers of the state. Their experiences in public connection with the rural population of the state through their columns are reckoned as of sufficient value to the college heads to ask their opinions on these state matters.

PARKER HAS PLAN FOR SETTLING UP AGED WAR CLAIMS

Specialist Undertakes One of the Biggest Problems of the Twentieth Century

Washington — (AP) — In a modest suite of offices not far from the state department Judge Edwin B. Parker, 60-year-old lawyer, is rounding out his career as one of the most extraordinary specialists in this age of specialization.

With a relatively small staff of assistants he is functioning as a specialist in the treatment of extremely complex economic wounds left by the war, which unless healed might prove sources of infection to threaten the peace of the former combatants.

Already responsible for the settlement of the war claims of American citizens against the central powers and the related economic differences between Austria and Hungary growing out of their separation, he has now undertaken to pass upon the alien claims against the United States. His three titles — umpire of the mixed claims commission, United States and Germany; commissioner of the tripartite claims commission and war claims arbitrator — stand him as one of the most unique figures in the history of international economic relations.

An American, he was appointed umpire of the mixed claims commission about five years ago in compliance with a suggestion from Germany that such a selection for this post, usually assigned to a neutral or arbitral tribunal, would be satisfactory to that government. About 15,000 claims demanding approximately $1,500,000,000 for damages resulting from Germany's war activities were submitted to the commission and it early became apparent that, under the old method of hearing them one by one, at least 32 years would be required to dispose of them. So Judge Parker decided to introduce a new system of procedure.

The normal method would have been for the umpire to act only in cases where the commissioners representing America and Germany disagreed. Judge Parker, however, had the claims classified and typical cases selected in each group. He then sat down with the other commissioners to hear arguments, and decisions were brought in on these test cases laying down broad general principles to be observed in the other cases. As a result many were disposed of by agreement on the facts by the German and American legal agents.

Now, five years after the commission began work on the longest list of claims ever presented to such a tribunal, only a few of the more complicated cases remain to be disposed of; the sum involved has been reduced to $250,000,000 and 94 per cent of all of the Americans who have received awards will be paid in full within the next few weeks. The other six per cent, whose awards exceed $100,000 each, will receive that amount as part payment and the remainder, with interest, in installments.

These awards are being paid under provisions of the alien property law recently enacted by congress, which also created Judge Parker's new post of war claims arbitrator and gave him practically unlimited power to adjudicate the claims of German, Austrian and Hungarian citizens for losses incurred through the war-time seizure of their property in the United States.

His post of commissioner of the tri-

Choose Local Airplane Pilot For Trans Continental Race This Fall

When the fleet of airplanes take off from New York airport next September on their non-stop flight to Los Angeles, Eddie K. Merritt, pilot of the North American Airway company's "Pride of Appleton" will probably be at the controls of one of them. It will, undoubtedly, be a Stinson-Detrolter and his companion will be Captain George Haldeman, whose name went down in history because of his historic flight toward Europe with Miss Ruth Elder last summer.

The great circle across the country will probably be followed by a large number of aviators on that occasion because at the end awaits cash prizes totaling $125,000—a small amount to be offered for feats that have been accomplished before.

Haldeman is now connected with the Stinson company and he, with Eddie Stinson, a couple of months ago brought the endurance flight record for the world back to this country from Europe.

The coupling of Merritt and Haldeman, according to Detroit men who will back the project, forms one of the best teams of aviators that could be obtained from among the ranks of commercial fliers in the United States.

Merritt, who has been flying for the past 11 years and who was a partner in the first commercial air line to operate out of New York city, has a record of being one of the most versatile fliers in the country. In addition to straight commercial flying such as he now is engaged in, he has "stunted" for moving picture companies, traveled with flying circuses and performed many other feats that entitle him to be classed among the group who are pioneering aviation.

With the progress of aviation he has learned that it is folly to take risks of any kind because they not only endanger the lives of the pilot and passengers but each accident places a black mark against aviation that is hard to wipe out.

The local pilot is a thorough believer in legislation for aeronautics and tries to impress on every aviator and airplane mechanic with whom he comes in contact the importance of having the ships inspected regularly by competent inspectors and of passing tests to show that they are fully qualified to take other peoples lives into their hands.

He believes that the aviator should have completed faith in his mechanic and not hesitate to "take the air" when the mechanic tells him that the airplane is ready for flight.

Upon coming here from the Stinson factory Merritt brought with him a licensed mechanic, Peter Keller, and the performance of the two in giving Appleton citizens lessons in "air mindedness" needs no describing.

partite claims commission is even more complicated than either of the other two. In that capacity he is arbitrator not only of Americans' claims against Austria and Hungary, but of difficulties arising between those governments. United under the Hapsburg monarchy during the war, they now are separate nations, but remain jointly liable for damages incurred by American nationals in the war. Determination of the relative liability of each, therefore, is one of Judge Parker's tasks. But only 3,000 cases have been submitted to this commission, and he likes the job.

Cameron - Schulz Gigantic Clearance Sale Starts Tomorrow

To Eddie Merritt, pilot of the "Pride of Appleton," goes the honor of being selected to fly with Captain George Haldeman of Atlantic flight fame, in the non-stop air derby across the United States in September. Prizes totaling $125,000 await the winners.

There are people who have viewed their homes and the city from the skies who, a few months ago, would have scoffed at the suggestion that they some day would fly.

Merritt and Keller have been quick to make friends since coming here and the pilot and mechanic, as well as the sturdy "Pride of Appleton," has had much to do with bringing people from a radius of more than 200 miles to make their initial flights.

With the establishment of weekly service to Milwaukee and Chicago each Wednesday, reservations have been made for capacity loads on each occasion and at a meeting of Wisconsin people interested in air mail, at Milwaukee Monday, those who have kept in touch with the development of the commercial air line and airport here were outspoken in their praise for the pioneering that had been done.

Therefore, when Merritt takes off on the flight that may mean additional fame and fortune to him, the best wishes for success will go with him from thousands of people in Appleton, the Fox river valley and many other sections of the country where he has lived, and made friends.

TAX REDUCTION

The senate has passed the tax bill in substantially the form President Coolidge desires. The total estimated tax reduction is as near the recommendation of himself and Secretary Mellon as could be possible. It is placed at $205,875,000. It is unlikely it will remain at this figure, because the bill now goes to conference and the measure passed by the house provides for a cut of $290,000,000. Out of the negotiations it is probable a measure will emerge which does not go far in excess, if any, of the $225,000,000 reduction the president was prepared to approve as an outside concession to politics.

The reduction of one per cent in the corporation rate is the outstanding feature of the bill. It will likely stand, except that it is possible a graduated lower tax may be provided for incomes below $15,000. At the rate of 12½ per cent fixed by the senate bill, corporation taxes are still too high. The rate of 11½ per cent set by the house, laying aside its relation to treasury revenues, is both fairer and sounder.

We are ten years from the war and the rates levied on corporation income, which are an indirect tax on the cost of living and a burden on production and consumption, are excessive. As a matter of principle, a rate of 10 per cent should be ample, and 8 per cent would be still healthier. The policy of applying our large surpluses since the war to debt reduction has stood in the way of this obviously needed tax reduction. Furthermore, it has been politically more popular to make reductions in other lines, and use our surpluses for other purposes than to give corporations relief. But the fact remains that this policy has not been in the interest of the public, which pays practically every dollar of corporation taxes in the price of things it eats, wears and enjoys.

The senate has retained the inheritance tax, which also as a matter of principle ought to be done away with. Inheritance taxation should be left to the states. We are not so hard up for revenue in this country that estates should be taxed both ways, and since the states will not give up the right it is better that they should have it exclusively, so that they may profit or suffer by it according to the reasonableness with which they exercise it. But here again politics stands in the way.

Three features of the senate bill are commendable: One which increases the exemption of corporations with income below $25,000; one which for the first time gives relief to individual taxpayers with incomes between $20,000 and $80,000, and one which increases the maximum individual income subject to the 25 per cent earned income deduction to $30,000. Other changes, which have to do with so-called nuisance taxes, are unimportant.

It is to be hoped the house will not let the senate have its entire way in adjusting their differences. It might consistently demand a slightly larger reduction in the corporation tax, say half of one per cent, or the abolishment of inheritance taxes. While we think the wishes of the treasury department and the president ought to be respected in a general way, particularly as to the total reduction of taxes, the fact that surpluses in the past have uniformly exceeded estimates, offers some leeway for making specific reductions on their merits. If we could eliminate politics from the legislation tax reduction would be sounder and more constructive, but since that cannot be done we have to make the best of what the politicians will concede.

FARM AID VETO

It may be accepted as a certainty that the president will veto the McNary-Haugen bill. The fact that he is taking his time to formulate forcefully his message of disapproval leaves no doubt as to his course. For one insurmountable reason alone he is compelled to veto the measure. The attorney-general has held that the equalization fee which congress has insisted upon reincorporating in the bill is unconstitutional. The president is not going to sign an act which his legal department advises is in violation of the constitution. Outside of that, he has objections which are sufficiently valid to him, based on economic grounds. He believes the scheme is impractical and unscientific, and that it cannot give permanent relief to agriculture. Under the circumstances, he has no alternative but to use the veto.

It is a matter of regret that the president and congress could not have evolved a measure offering assistance to the farmer. Whether any plan that may be devised is effective or not, the farmers are clearly entitled to help from the government, either as an aid to self-recovery or as a subsidy. We have subsidized manufacturing for generations. We say it could not exist without the subsidy. We propose to subsidize shipping in order to have a merchant marine, and the president has on his desk a bill of this character which it is not improbable he will sign. We have granted other subsidies and other assistance to special interests, but the farmers have had nothing. On the contrary, they have had to submit to burdensome taxation to make it possible for manufacturers to prosper and for commerce and other pursuits to thrive. Their dissatisfaction with the existing order of things is natural and consistent. It is unfortunate the administration has not done and does not seem to be able to do something in their behalf. The effects on election day may be deservedly serious.

GIVE ENGLAND CREDIT

The British accept in principle Secretary Kellogg's plan to outlaw war, and welcome the proposal with enthusiasm. The apparent effort to approve the divergent attitudes of both the French and American governments may seem to smack of insincerity, but we do not think this interpretation should be placed upon it. Fairness demands that the British government be credited with an honest desire to do away with war and set up permanent peace. It is the one nation above all others whose vital interests would best be served by settled peace. And by this we do not mean to imply a preservation of the status quo which would close the door to complete independence by anyone of the nations or colonies making up the British empire. The American plan does not contemplate proscription of wars looking to this end. But with her distantly separated units and far-flung possessions, war with another power is more disturbing and potentially more dangerous to Great Britain than to any other nation, therefore she should wish to preserve peace, and we think she does.

While subscribing to the American ideal, she nevertheless feels she must take into account her special position as a nation, and responsibilities with which she can tolerate no interference. She compares them not without force to the special position we occupy with reference to South America and our commitments under the Monroe doctrine. She must also have regard for her obligations as a member of the League of Nations and as a signer of the Locarno treaties.

There would seem to be no reason why the desires and purposes of the two governments cannot be reconciled in this latest peace movement. Likewise as to France. All three, and in common with other nations, must devoutly wish for international peace. They can serve the welfare of their people and they can face the bar of world opinion only by honestly striving to bring it about. The British reply to Mr. Kellogg suggests the necessity of further conversations and it would seem to afford a basis on which the aims of the two governments may be coordinated. If it means a compromise, that too will be acceptable, for a half loaf is better than no loaf at all when it comes to concrete measures for making war more difficult. Whatever may be our reaction to Mr. Chamberlain's reply, it is cordial in tone and promises the fullest support, so far as his government can go, to the Kellogg proposals.

The earliest known use in English literature of the expression "I do not choose" is in "The Merchant of Venice," "Twelfth Night" and other Shakespearean plays.

THE ROACHES ARE ON THE RUN

A correspondent who told in this column how the roaches had been all shot to a place her husband mentioned by my treatment, immediately started some kind of movement. I have been getting, seems as though, practically nothing else but inquiries like these: "What do you prescribe for cockroaches? Ours seem to enjoy the best of health but if your treatment will make them less noisy and restless nights we'll feel that the postage was well spent." "I do not doubt that your remedy is all to the good, for cockroaches, but what I am looking for is something to make her roaches wish their ancestors had believed in birth control."

Anyway, there is a vast, seething movement of some kind going on in the cockroach world. In three or four thousand domiciles, I hope, the movement is akin to that of rats deserting a sinking ship, except that my treatment usually does not sink the ship. Still, roaches are wily fellows or sly dames. Even if they are gone now they may not be gone forever. They haven't shaken the dust from their feet, remember. They have just licked it off. That is the fatal flaw in cockroach technique or custom that makes the tribe vulnerable to attack. All they need to know is what dust to provide for the roaches to walk through. The what I tell you, by mail, I am afraid to mention it to print.

If anybody doubts that cockroaches are very shrewd, just listen to this story, which I can vouch for as it comes straight from a doctor good and true:

Last January when the temperature fell to one degree P for four nights, I found a bottle with half a pint of cockroaches in it and they were frozen hard. I emptied them into the stove, but a few fell to the floor, and in a few minutes these that escaped the flames were walking about and congratulating each other, I suppose. I found some more frozen hard, thawed them out, and they seemed normal and grateful in a few minutes. I thought this might interest you. I did not believe it possible.

I have too much respect for cockroaches to question the fact. Maybe they were feeling depressed and lonesome and played the trick on the doctor just for the sake of getting warm and a bite to eat.

Second only to this annihilating powder as munitions against the roach hordes comes a mixture of flour, three parts, with plaster of Paris, one part. The roaches will eat of this, become thirsty, take a drink, and the plaster sets within leaving a very reserved and somewhat stiff aggregation of roaches to be swept up by the housekeeper.

Several householders have assured me that the generous use of powdered borax dusted in corners and crevices where the roaches run will drive them out of the house. This is so cheap and so harmless to man that it would seem worthy of trial.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

What to Do
What should I do for a little boy who has worms? They are very small, white. . . (S. E.)
Answer—A little boy? You might gently hint to his guardian that medical attention is necessary. If the little boy is by any chance your son the kindest thing you can do for him is to take him to the doctor or call the doctor to treat him.

Don't Read—Better Run
Please recommend a list of books for the lay reader that might contain information that would help a sufferer of emotional and nervous instability to get a "hold" of herself. I am 36—suddenly without family except invalid mother—work to which I have given most of my energy wiped out by radio—hard to concentrate—sympathetic nerves—fearful jangle—wake with a start—fever of anxiety—self control! (F. L. M.)

Answer—I advise you not to look for cure or comfort in books. There is a raft of quick sellers about your "nerves" and how to "control" them, and very amusing they are for those of us who happen to be free from fear, worry or anxiety at the moment, but blow your cash rather for more wholesome entertainment. Run, walk, play outdoors, putter about the yard, dig in your garden. Your situation is not so happy as it has been, this is just a run of tough luck, and we all need a reasonable proportion of tough luck. Without sentimental feeling, I do sympathize with your situation and honor you for your courage and charity.

Mica Dust
I am a worker in mica, and there is a fine dust flying from it which I of course inhale. Is this injurious to my health? (A. V. W.)
Answer—No, except that the dust is a local irritant to the breathing passages.

SHERWOOD ANDERSON AS A GOLDFISH

If his own words are to be believed, Sherwood Anderson feels that he is very much like a goldfish — with no privacy left. And he thinks that condition is raising hob with his profession as a writer. What is more, he thinks that the curtailing of the privacy of writers is depriving America of a literature.

In a magazine article Anderson complains as follows: "Once they get after you in America, you are a game goose. Your private life is searched into; your face is constantly being printed somewhere, and the worst of it all is that everyone is quite convinced that it is what you want. . . . Let us say you are, like myself, a writer of tales. Surely everyone knows that to write tales of people in any understanding way, you cannot separate yourself from people. But what chance have I with some impossible thing like a famous writer?"

The complaint is not new. Very many writers have felt the same thing and have given expression to it. It was already a problem a century or more ago in some countries and although personal publicity has never been carried to the lengths of that practiced in America today, the great writer who has acquired some popular fame has often felt like a goldfish in a bowl and has sighed for the obscure days of his apprenticeship. Some have established defense mechanisms against it. By seeming to be eccentric they have been able to secure some privacy, but of course that has not solved the real Sherwood problem of how a famous writer can report naturally with people without having them close up mentally like clams because they think he is after copy.

Anderson himself suggests that the practice of signing books and articles and stories in the magazines be done away with. He wants all writing to become as anonymous as a newspaper article. The suggestion is fantastic and he of course knows it. The buying of great names by the magazines and book publishers has become a business so well entrenched and so profitable that its discontinuance is not to be thought of in a practical world that cares enormously much more for money than for artistic excellence. Ninety-nine writers out of a hundred would themselves strongly oppose it. And while Sherwood Anderson is now fed up with personal publicity, I would cheerfully bet that in his days of struggle he encouraged it to the limit. It is good business all right.

though it is harmful to good art. But a writer must eat.

The problem suggested by Sherwood Anderson is a real one, even if there is no solution. What is the first thing that usually happens to a person who wins some measure of fame as a writer? The women's clubs get after him. They want him to lecture for them. Nine chances out of ten he is the poorest speaker they could select — writers are often poor talkers — but that is not the point. They want to see the celebrity. Mark Twain pointed out that it didn't make the slightest difference what he said in his lectures; crowds did not come to hear him but to see him. Allowing for exaggeration, that is broadly true.

Carl Van Doren admitted to me while on a lecture tour that lecturing was the last thing he wanted to do and that it seriously interfered with his work as a writer, but the pay was so good that he could not afford to refuse the offers. I know of one writer of some little reputation who answers all requests for lectures by placing his price so ridiculously high that he is never engaged. Which is what

The Question Box

A. He took off from Roosevelt Field, Long Island, for his flight to Paris.

Q. What is the purpose of the Cheerio broadcast, who is backing it and why?
J. B. S.

A. The National Broadcasting Company says: "The purpose of the Cheerio broadcast is easily explained. It is the use of the radio to broadcast the ordinary friendly act of any person who drops in to see a convalescent invalid or other shut-in, to say, 'Good morning. I hope you have a fine day today.' The radio is being he after. But he is financially so situated that he does not have to lecture for a living. I wonder what he would do if he were less independent?

But more serious than that is the loss of anonymity in the writer's normal home surroundings. Robert Frost gained his fame by portraying his simple New England neighbors. For twenty years or so they didn't know he was a writer; he was merely a neighbor and they were open and aboveboard with him, meeting him naturally. For his own sake as an artist the continuance of this relationship is vital. But how can it continue when those neighbors have begun to regard themselves as "material"?

It is a question without an answer, a dilemma that every writer has to face.

used in this way by an individual who does it without compensation, either in money or in personal prestige, inasmuch as every effort is made by him, and the broadcasting company in cooperation with him, to keep his identity secret, not because his identity is important, but because the personality of the broadcast is believed by him to be vital to the success of its purpose. This individual gives his services, and the broadcasting company cooperates in giving its facilities and also in furnishing music for the programs."

See-Sawing On Broadway

By Gilbert Swan

New York — There should be a moral or a fable or something to this true tale of Broadway.

A couple of months ago the "main stem" witnessed the appearance of a sandwich woman. She was a witted crone, dressed in the shabbiest of apparel. The business manager of a beauty cream concern noticed her and got a bright idea. He hired her to carry around a sign that cried out its words to passing womanhood. It said, as near as I remember, something to this effect: "Do you want to look like this at my age?" The alternative was, of a course, to hasten to So-and-so's beauty parlor.

The weeks passed and the aged crone made some money. Having little to spend it upon, she was able to save most of her salary. And being feminine, the appeal of her own ad began to hit her. She took some of her savings and bought better clothes, brushed her hair up a bit and went out on the street, still carrying her sign. The business manager who had hired her came upon her in her rounds.

"Hey, what's the big idea! You look almost respectable. You can't get business that way. You're fired!"

Every Broadway theater has a "cat mascot" that lives, eats, procreates and dies in an artificial world of stage sets and colored lights. These cats are invariably the pets of actors and stage crews.

A stray cat that has half an ounce of sense and is engaged in seeking a home has merely to sneak past the doorman. Thereafter a comfortable life is assured, for tradition says that even a black cat that wanders upon a theater stage is a harbinger of good fortune.

Lester, the favorite of the Knickerbocker theater, offers a typical example. Lester came out of the night as hungry and miserable a cat as ever disgraced an alley. They named him after a musical comedy that was then rehearsing, "Listen Lester." This production has long since come and gone, but Lester goes purring on.

Lester is credited with premonitions. If he walks out on a rehearsal, the superstitious ones will tell you that the audience will walk out quite as undeliberately. But if the show is good and destined to "catch on," Lester cannot be budged by milk, honey or fresh liver.

The most uncitly-like figure in Gotham continues to be the loutish-looking lad who gallops his horse ahead of the trains just beyond Tenth Avenue. This Paul Revere custom has without the inroads of metropolitan life. In the days before traffic cops were invented and safety signal systems devised, a lone rider went ahead of trains going into the yards along the waterfront. For some reason the original ordinance never has been repealed and so, with skynines towering all about, lads in blue overalls and tattered hats go galloping down the car tracks, swinging their lanterns and tampering with the switches just ahead of a slow-puffing engine. To come upon one in mid-day while all around swirl the symbols of modern life is like meeting some fantastic figure from a dream.

Like so many merry wags, one of New York's most popular wits is a young lody who is essentially bitter and tragic. She has made several attempts on her life, it is said. After her last try, so the story goes, she met a friend who is a prominent magazine artist.

"Darling," said the friend, "if you don't stop committing suicide you'll ruin your health."

first one sips a little from a spoon, later one drinks from the cup.

Q. What is the difference between warm-blooded and cold-blooded animals?
C. W. C.

A. In warm-blooded animals the temperature of the body is kept approximately at a fixed point, generally higher than that of the surrounding medium. In animals which are called cold-blooded, the blood has no fixed temperature, but varies with the temperature of the medium in which the animal lives.

Q. What material is used for snowshoe laces?
W. J.

A. They are usually made of horse, deer, calf, or goat hide.

DAWES ALWAYS HELPS HIS WIFE TO CHOOSE HER HATS AND GOWNS

"Hell an' Maria" Not so Wild When Mrs. Dawes Wants to Go Shopping

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a series of prospective "First Ladies" by Allene Sumner, staff writer for the Post-Crescent. In this article, Miss Sumner discusses Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, wife of the vice president.

WASHINGTON — If Mrs. Charles Dawes, wife of the vice president, should be our next First Lady, her husband, the president, would establish the length of the First Lady's reception gowns, to say nothing of gowns in general.

For all the intimates of the Dawes family declare that for years "Charles" has established his wife's hemline, and that they see no reason why even the White House would alter this custom.

There is a nutshell—or a tape measure—is perfect denial of a popular Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dawes myth which insists that "this frail little woman" winds the "Hell! Maria!" vice president about her little finger.

The vice president decides her skirt length, helps select her hats and gowns, decides which dinner invitations shall be accepted or refused and, in short, places Mrs. Dawes in about the same position as the Senate, over which he presides.

IT'S OKEY WITH HER But—with a difference! He's at the helm in the Dawes ménage by special request of Mrs. Dawes and because he and his wife are so almost completely in accord on all subjects that there's no chance for argument.

Mr. Dawes not only says that his wife's hemlines shall be nine or eight inches above the floor, but she says so herself. They are both conservatives—in dress, as well as politics.

"The main thing I demand in a woman is that she is not conspicuous," is a vice presidential epigram quoted by a close friend.

And Caro Dawes is certainly anything but conspicuous. Retiring, shy, diffident and modest, are adjectives used in Washington social circles to describe her.

But here again the intimates call the "shy" story a myth. "Mrs. Dawes is very much the Grande Dame," they tell you. "Very conscious of her family and position and so serene in her own self-confidence that she does not feel the need of putting herself forward."

But to the stranger she certainly gives a vivid impression of almost a childlike diffidence.

AT WHITE HOUSE RECEPTION I was passing down the White House receiving line one night when just as I stopped before the president and his wife I was attracted by a little flurry of impulsive beckoning hands behind the red rope where the special guests, the cabinet members and their wives, were assembled.

A tiny little wren-like woman who seemed all big dark eyes and impulsive beckoning hands was signaling her pleasure at seeing someone in the line.

It was Mrs. Dawes. I had tea in her palatial home in Belmont street in the capital just a few days ago. Both the Evanston and Washington homes are solid, impressive, typical houses of a rich man. The Washington home is of cream stone and tops a leafy ravine into which the garden pours. They say that the vice president took this particular house for the huge elm tree that falls over the side porch.

Dignity is perhaps the one word that best characterizes the Dawes home atmosphere. A butler stood at the open door like a graven image impassively extending his silver card tray.

Mrs. Dawes, in beige lace and brown chiffon scarf, received in the living room doorway. Her smile and hand-clasp were pleasant and cordial but her "line" moved briskly and competently on into the rich-carpeted, huge living room with its maroon velvet draperies and upholstery, its club-size fireplace and its handsome oil paintings.

The vice president's study off the living room is the homiest room in the big mansion, barring, perhaps, the yellow cretonned sun breakfast porch. A copy of Ludwig's "Napoleon," a worn Bible, and a rich Moroccan-bound dictionary with a fine piece of fiction were upon the vice presidential desk. The "children's" pictures were there, too.

TWO ADOPTED CHILDREN The "children" are the adopted two, Virginia, 14, and Dana, 16, and the grandchildren of the Dawes' only daughter, Mrs. Caroline Erickson of Evanston. The grandchildren are Charles, 8, and Caroline, 4. Rufus Fearing Dawes, a son, was drowned while attending college.

The children—her adopted daughters and her grandchildren—are the supreme interests of Mrs. Dawes' life. Many a senatorial lady with daughters finds herself at Mrs. Dawes' right or left by the vice president's wife own request at various social affairs, and soon finds herself in a serious conversation with earnest Mrs. Dawes on the subject of daughter-rearing.

"Earnestness" is another characteristic of Mrs. Dawes. She measures everything with the yardstick of right or wrong, they say. She will not permit her name only to be used in a charitable cause, but she insists on doing work which money could not buy.

A CHARMING HOSTESS But no hostess in Washington is more beautiful and more thoughtful of her guests' comfort. A thousand people must have streamed through her home this other afternoon, but for hours vast silver bowls of iced chocolate and coffee and tea were filled and refilled, hundreds of iced cakes and cream cheese sandwiches and donbons were produced magically by the silver-haired older women who are the Dawes servants.

The reputation which "Hell an' Maria Dawes" has fastened upon himself by his violent speeches worries his wife very much, close friends say. Someone attended a dinner party not long ago at which the vice president ident announced loudly that he wanted a big cup of coffee with his dinner and none of these "nit-wit, peewee, demitasses after I'm all through and, don't care whether I get it or not."

"Why, Charles?" Mrs. Dawes said, explaining aside that she did wish Charles would not be so publicly articulate with all his demands.

DISLIKES "HELL AN' MARIA" POSE Close friends say that Dawes has gotten stubborn about clinging to this "gough neck" reputation—which all began in one wild tirade of deliberately planned political swearing at a Senate hearing and was designed to attract public attention to his cause.

In reality he is a gentleman and a most sensitive and delicately-perceived man, but he seems to take delight in his reputation.

Mrs. Dawes does wish that people would better understand this pose and really know that "Charles" is a connoisseur of art in its myriad forms, a composer, a gracious host, and a churchman. She likes the Charles Dawes who played his violin day after day to sick Mrs. McKinley in the White House.

Not the hell-raiser that he likes to make the public believe he is.

DR. PEABODY WILL GO ABROAD JUNE 2

Will Attend Lectures at Oxford Before Making Tour of European Countries

Dr. H. L. Peabody of the First Congregational Church will sail on the "Majestic," June 2, for England and the continent where he will attend lectures at Oxford and sessions of the Sherwood Eddy Seminar, an international organization of 40 professors, editors, and ministers, who meet to discuss and attend lectures on international, social and industrial problems.

Dr. Peabody will spend his first six weeks abroad in England where he will attend the Oxford lectures and tour the country. For two or three weeks in July he will attend the Seminar at Toynbee Hall, London. Then he, with the Seminar, will go to Berlin for one week and from there he will go alone to Rome and join the Girls' University Travel Group, an American organization which offers lectures and conducts educational excursions about the city for its members. From Rome, Dr. Peabody will go to Geneva, Switzerland to join the Sherwood Eddy International Institute which will hold its sessions close to the headquarters of the League of Nations. Members of the League's Secretariat will hold conferences and lecture to the Institute. Dr. Peabody will go from Geneva to Paris where he will join Dr. Louis Baker. The two Appleton men will remain in Paris for a short time and then travel to Brittany for a brief stay in rural France. They will sail home from Havre and land in Quebec sometime in September.

While Dr. Peabody is abroad he will preach several times. In conjunction with international peace efforts, English churches are sending their pastors to the United States to preach and reciprocal efforts are made on the part of the American churches.

What To Do
When Child
Won't Eat

From "Children—The Magazine for Parents"

What should one do with a child who refuses to eat? The following plan is suggested:

Have the child come in and sit down at the table five times a day, but at the end of twenty minutes by the clock, in the case of the mid-morning and mid-afternoon lunches, or of thirty minutes in the case of the three main meals, he is to leave the table, whether he has eaten much, little or nothing. This is to be done, not for one meal, but for every meal. A small portion, a teaspoonful, or at most a tablespoonful at first, of every article suitable for him, is to be placed on his plate, but not the slightest effort to induce him to eat it should be made.

"How long will it be before he begins to eat?" the mother asks. This it is impossible to prophesy, as it will vary with the determination of the child, his knowledge of the perseverance of his parents, and the degree of appetite perversion that has been wrought by the course previously pursued. It may safely be stated, however, that the cure is usually well on the way long before the conclusion of the second day.

A sick child should be placed under the doctor's care whether his case is light or severe. Take measles, for instance. It is known now, says "Children, the Magazine for Parents," that in every case the eyes must be carefully protected from strong light and that the patient must not be allowed to read either during the disease or during convalescence. It is known that watchful care is necessary to prevent ear-troubles and through convalescence as well as sickness the child must be protected from taking cold.

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
THE motherly saleswoman in the electric shop took great pride in exhibiting her wares. She was as proud of a new model of sweep-er as she would have been of a child bringing home an excellent report card.

"This motherly instinct in women, by the way, often seeks the inanimate on which to bestow affection, when they feel the lack of human relationship."

She would lay her hand affectionately on a washing machine, or pull at a raveling off a mangle, or she would have patted Johnny's head or broken a thread from Susie's petticoat.

"Interesting work, isn't it?" I suggested.

"It is," she replied. "I get so interested in all these wonderful things, really, I guess I just about love them. When we sell anything and it's taken out of the shop, I wonder what kind of a home it is going to have and if the people will be kind to it."

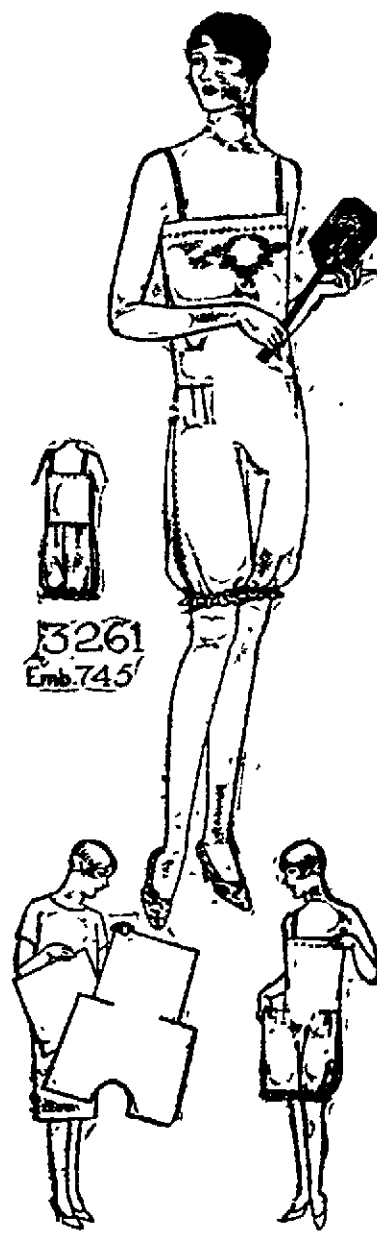

"It's heartbreaking sometimes," she went on. "Although most of these electric things are just about fool-proof, often in less than a month they come back in pitiful condition. I felt so sorry for that lovely vacuum-cleaner in the corner. It was so shiny and new a few weeks ago. Yesterday it came back for repairs. They said it wouldn't work. I wish you could have seen it. The bag was full of dirt to the top. They did not even empty it. And the brush was so full of hair and grease and everything on earth, nearly, we fairly had to cut it out."

"Other things come back battered, broken, and dirty. I don't know what some people are made of. They don't deserve these nice things."

I thought there was a sermon in that. The wonderful inventions that have taken years to think out, and that workmen take such pride in making perfect, do deserve care and decent treatment.

It is vandalism to destroy things, or permit them to be destroyed, no matter who owns them.

PRACTIBILITY KEYNOTE

HALF SHINGLES, half wide boards, the Portland has a friendly, homey air augmented by the cheery row of upper windows.

This home was built with an eye to practical housekeeping. For a modest size, it allows tremendous space for keeping things put away. There's a closed downstairs off the living room for wraps and upstairs all three bedrooms have large closets. There is an extra one for linens and even the brooms have their own special place for storing away.

Large windows on each side of the fireplace keep the living room light. The stairs, rising out of one end of this room, are the kind that can be made unusually attractive by hanging an old shawl or some decorative rug or tapestry from the railing.

The dining room has windows on two sides and gets light directly from the other two directions through the kitchen and the living room. In fact it has so much light that one could try out unusual interior decorating schemes there—something in blue, maybe.

The breakfast nook is in a corner of the house so it looks out on both the back and the side yard. And off the kitchen is an honest-to-goodness back porch, large enough for a swing, or some easy chairs and a table.

The price of the Portland is from $5500 to $6500. For further information write the Standard Homes Bureau, Colorado Building, Washington, D. C.

THE TINYMITES

By Hal Cochran

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

Will nails and saws and hammers set, wee Scouty cried, "Come on, let's get to work upon our houseboat now. What are we waiting for? 'You're right,' the friendly woodsman said. "This best that we all go ahead and sail right in."

Now, first of all, pick big boards for the floor. "This part we'll have to do just right. The houseboat must be watertight, so it will float upon the stream. How awful it would be if, when we try it, it would sink. You'd all get soaking wet. Just think! But, let's not worry over that. Just leave it all to me."

And, as the saws and hammer flew, the first thing that the Tinies knew, the houseboat floor was finished, and 'twas solid as could be. "Now," said the woods man, "please take note that I have made it so 'twill float. You need not be afraid when you are sailing out to sea."

Then Scouty said, "Well, let's not stop. I think this houseboat should have a top. Here are four posts that we can use to hold the roof up high." The woodsman smiled. "Well, mercy me, they'll fit exactly right," said he. "Go right ahead and start it. You can do it, if you try."

It was a tiresome task, no doubt, but all the others helped him, and soon the houseboat had a roof that really looked quite grand. "Say, this is classy," Clowny said. "I like good shelter over my head. Whenever there's a rainstorm we will know just where to stand!"

"Hey, all of you come on inside. I'm sure I felt a little drop of water on my brow. The roof we've built was not in vain. I'm sure that it is going to rain." And, as they huddled, "Cry," said, "You're right! It's raining now."

and
"MOM"
Their Letters

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

Dear Mom:

To go on with my story about the meeting of Norman and me with Pede

Norman said some good, old-fashioned words when Pede insisted on my going with him and then Pede stepped back and looked straight at Norman with fire in his eye.

"The Senor forgets the lady," he said in a voice that sounded like the rustle of silk.

"You'd better do the same," Norman told him. "She doesn't seem to want to keep that date." Then he turned to me and asked me if I knew this man. I had to say I did, of course, but I was not going to have Norman think I had deliberately walked him into the man. So I told Pede I was very sorry but he'd have to excuse me because I didn't know I had a heavy date with him.

Then Norman took a step forward, with me on his arm, but Pede got in the way again. He put out a hand and stopped me.

That was too much for Norman. He swung on Pede's jaw and spun him half way around. I guess Norman didn't stop to think how perfectly insane it was. But he knew in an instant, all right. Pede whirled back and smashed him in the eye.

By that time a crowd had gathered on the scene and more were coming. I was fighting mad too. Because it certainly wasn't my fault if those two dumb-bells wanted to indulge in a cheap street scene. So I ducked.

When Norman followed me back into the apartment after finishing it up with Pede—three men pulled 'em apart—I gave him a good sound talking to. And put some chopped steak on his eye. I didn't have any other kind. It would have been all right but I'd already salted and peppered it.

Norman didn't stay very long after that but this morning he was feeling better. Well, I do hope his aunt won't hear about it.

Dearest love,

MARYE.

NEXT: Mom upbraids Marye.

WORKING WIVES
VS. HOME WIVES

BY ALLENE SUMNER

No phases of our modern life seems to bring such a blast and a moan and a general to-do whenever it is mentioned as the working wife—not that wives, most of 'em, haven't always worked, but I mean the wage-earning, eight-hour-a-day-er, outside the home working wife. One would think that by this time she would be casually accepted. We have known her nearly 10 years. But not so. Let there appear one letter of protest against employed married women in any newspaper anywhere and the editor is buried under the flood of letters that sweeps into his office.

EVERYBODY WAILS

The letters have an astonishing similarity. They are the same today as they were a year ago. No one has done any real thinking on the subject. There are the usual hate letters from men who complain that they can't get jobs because all the married women have them. There are the usual letters from unwed damozels who rave that they can't get jobs because all the married women "who've got men to support them" have all the jobs. There are usual letters urging employers to refuse to hire married women. There are the usual letters from the married women themselves, challenging the world to show just and true cause why they haven't the same right to work for a home and education for their children as a single girl has to work for mink coats and French perfume and weekly facials and marzels.

All the letters are so futile. Not one of them examples anything but the earth-old habit of human sophistry—of so construing one's own condition, one's own niche in life, that it satisfies one's philosophy.

In other words, the single girl's philosophy demands war on the working wife, until she herself is a wife when, if she wants to work, she creates a new philosophy atune with her new condition and insists on her right to work. If she wants to. Only in the rarest case does one find a wife who admits truth in some of the single woman's arguments, or a single girl who looks at the question impersonally and grants the wife's right to work.

THE WHY OF IT

I am only repeating what I have said many times on this subject when I say that great sweeping social conditions make our moves rather than we ourselves. There would not be enough working wives to create a problem if there were not a demand for them which they are meeting. Wives still would be in homes if the great social and economic scheme needed them there more than it needs them somewhere else.

WOMEN PLANNING FOR FALL FLOWER SHOW

Think Arrangements Should Be Made Now So Gardeners Can Prepare

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—That New London will engage in an autumn flower show was brought out in the tentative plans of the newly re-elected president of the New London Civic Improvement league, Mrs. Carrie Archibald Hooper. Mrs. Hooper means to bring the matter up for discussion at the June meeting of the league, at which time committees will be named and definite plans formulated.

In speaking of the matter she stated her belief that if the matter were brought to the attention of the members of the club and the community now at the opening period, there would be ample time to plan displays, varieties of flowers and prepare for the show, which will be held probably in September. Prizes would be offered and there would be a special department for children. Flower shows of this kind have been held in many cities of the state successfully, and have been found to encourage an appreciation of beauty, besides creating a fine co-operative spirit.

The next meeting of the club will be held on June 11, and at that time the executive board will make a formal announcement of new committees, and each committee of the past year will make a full report of work done during the year. A membership drive will be made before the meeting is held in order that new members will become interested in the work proposed for the new year. Each league member will be asked to bring one prospective new member.

SOUTH AMERICAN IS SPEAKER AT WEEKLY ROTARIAN LUNCHEON

Declares Trouble Between Latins and Americans Due to Misunderstandings

Special to Post-Crescent
Clintonville—A. Martinez Delgado, of Bogota, South America, was the speaker at a meeting of the Rotary club Monday. Senor Delgado, a native of South America, is a representative and dealer of the Four Wheel Drive Auto company at Bogota.

He has been in this country for several months, where he has been endeavoring to interest a banking group in financing a boat and barge line in his country, extending from the coast 700 miles inland.

He said that much trouble and ill-feeling had arisen between the Latin-American countries and the United States due to mutual misunderstanding. Frequently, unscrupulous business methods have been used in exploiting these countries, on the part of those representative Americans. Too often, he said, a country is misjudged because of the flamboyant and jettison population drifting from one country to the other, instead of by the real representative type; that until he came to this country himself, he was suspicious of our people, as his experience had been confined to the racial and the man using unfair business methods; that only recently he had been comparing his experiences with that of a man who stood high in the confidence of the people of his native country, and who acknowledged that his attitude toward this country and its institutions, had been much the same before he came here.

He spoke of the educational opportunities offered in his country differing somewhat from that of his northern neighbors.

He spoke of the vast natural resources in South America which were as yet, practically untouched.

He paid a fine tribute to Rotary and said it was one of the finest mediums for establishing harmonious international relationships which had yet been advanced.

WAUPACA-CO ASKS SAFEGUARDS FOR SHERIDAN CROSSING

Waupaca—An automobile accident occurred in front of Rhode's store about noon Sunday when Charley Genette, driving north on Oak-st. collided with David Taber who was about to make a U turn at the end of Mill-st. Taber's car was the only one damaged.

At the meeting of the highway committee held at the office of highway commissioner Huffcutt Wednesday, pay rolls and miscellaneous bills were audited.

The committee spent the afternoon in conference with the Portage-co committee, railway grade engineer Blato and division engineer Hazelton on the proposed relocation of federal highway No. 10 at Sheridan. The following resolution was adopted by the Waupaca-co committee. Resolved: That Waupaca county committee prefers to retain the old road with the present grade crossing properly safeguarded with alarms and the removal of the warehouse between the railroad and the highway. If the highway commission refuses to grant this request, our second choice is a relocation south of the tracks, as an overhead subway is impractical as well as prohibitive in cost.

Two Facts About Brick Paving of financial interest to any Taxpayer

Weather usually starts what traffic merely finishes, in destroying pavement.

Paving materials not specially made to prevent it, absorb water. This sets up injurious chemical change—or, freezing, expands and destroys. And paving surfaces, not designed to have resilience, suffer from traffic punishment.

Paving brick, being vitrified, is unchanging. It does not change chemically; does not soften. It does not absorb water. Laid on any good base, with sand cushion, and bound with asphalt, it is a flexible surface—one which water does not penetrate.

Nothing can wear out this toughest of all surfaces. And it protects the base from weather and traffic. Wherever brick pavements are, low cost records prove this.

"The A. B. C. of Good Paving," a taxpayer's manual, tells in words and pictures how engineers today build ever-lasting, low cost, brick surfaced roads and streets to National Paving Brick Manufacturers Association, 312 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

Mr. Nelson was honored for his work on the conservative department of the editorial section. His initiation of several new and successful features, and his co-operation in the business section of the yearbook, were commended by the editor-in-chief, Arthur Mueller. Miss Florence Bennett, Wisconsin Rapids, was awarded the silver cup for her work on the editorial section. She has been member of the editorial staff for three years and was in charge of the organization department of the yearbook. Forty-nine members are on the editorial staff.

"THE YELLOW LILY"

If masculine hearts are palpitating at the beauty and charm of Billie Dove in her latest First National starring vehicle at the Elite Theatre, "The Yellow Lily" wives and sweethearts have their treat in the picture, too. Masterful, powerfully preserved Clive Brook is playing opposite the star!

Brook's rugged during the past year has swept him right up to the gates of stardom and he has a notable following of admirers, both feminine and masculine. If the ladies like his looks, the men are intrigued by his typically English repression and histrionic ability.

"The Yellow Lily" is an adaptation of Lajos Biro's play. Brooks enacts the role of a Hungarian archduke. Miss Dove that of a village beauty in Hungary. Alexander Korda, famous Hungarian director, held forth at the megaphone. A hand-picked cast, headed by Gustav von Seyffertitz, Nicholas Soussanin, Jane Winton, Bodil Rossing, Charles Puffy and Marc MacDormont, enacts other picturesque Hungarian characters.

Miss Dove is one of the few American players in "The Yellow Lily" and Brook with Miss Winton, represents England portraying Hungary!

It is showing at the Elite Theatre for the last times today.

"LAST LAUGH"

At last the perfect picture—really the picture without a flaw. Such is "The Last Laugh," the U. F. A. production directed by F. W. Murnau, with Emil Jannings as star being presented at Fischer's Appleton theatre, Thursday and Friday. This is the one picture which no critics, either in Europe or in New York, has suggested might be improved. Without exception they have said it is sufficient just as it is—that to alter it in the slightest degree would mar it.

Remarkable, revolutionary, in several ways is "The Last Laugh," but human and dramatically appealing; it has no slapstick, no cheap movie devices, yet hardened picture goers, critics and fans alike, sit through it spellbound, now laughing, now weeping. It is astonishing how many metropolitan critics have acknowledged proudly that "The Last Laugh" made them weep, and also admitted that it caused them to laugh out loud.

Being devoid of the usual motion picture subterfuges, what is it that gives "The Last Laugh," its grip; its humanness and its art. Both its star and its director know human nature and are masters of picture play technique. They go unerringly to the heart of the leading character and lay bare its soul. The character lives before you—it is the tragedy and comedy of actual life the spectators see. No play acting here—reality!

A simple chronicle it is. An old man has been porter and doorman at a fashionable Berlin hotel for years. Of powerful physique, magnificent in his gold lace and braid, self-important but kindly in his limited authority, he looks upon himself as a fixture in his job, in fact as an "indispensable" adjunct to the establishment.

AN IMPOSING FIGURE
How imposing he is as he opens the door of a splendid carriage and stands at salute as its fashionable occupants alight, and with what abandon he swings a heavy trunk from the top of the equipage! In the humble quarters where he lives, he is looked upon as an important personage and his adoring daughter, who is about to be married, thinks him a great man.

The emotional tension of the earlier part of the picture is done in perfect keeping with the really lovable character of the old porter—a master stroke of directorial genius. Here is the essence of perfected comedy based on character delineation—no triviality, no buffoonery. Only a great actor like Jannings could round out the character so perfectly.

Carl Laemmle accomplishes a genuine coup in acquiring "The Last Laugh" for distribution by Universal. It will be the talk of the entire country this season, just as it already is the talk of New York.

MAKE NEW TRUCK FOR LIBRARY BOOKS

A new truck for hauling books to and from the shelves is now in operation in the high school library. The truck was constructed in the manual arts department by Lloyd Wydoski and Charles Earle. Harry Cameron is the instructor of the department.

The truck has three shelves and can carry a large number of books at one time. It is equipped with rubber tired ball bearing wheels and can be pushed with ease by the librarian. Sketches and plans of the truck were recently accepted by the Manual Arts magazine and will be published in the next issue, according to Mr. Cameron.

"Y" CLUB TAKES IN TWO NEW MEMBERS

Two candidates for the "Y" chapter of the high school will be initiated, and the first degree ritual of the club presented to members of the "C" chapter at the annual picnic of the clubs and the Girls' Reserve of the high school, Thursday, May 24, at "Green-patch" on the upper Fox river, according to J. W. Fugh, local work secretary.

The two members to be admitted to the "D" chapter are Clarence Lemke and Roy Winters. It is expected that a number of girls will be admitted to membership in the Girls' Reserve club on Thursday evening at the picnic.

State Making Headway In War Against Disease

BY C. A. HARPER
Wisconsin Health Officer

Wisconsin was the pioneer and leader in establishing sanatoria for the treatment and cure of tuberculosis. The state sanatorium near Wales was one of the first to be established in the United States.

The plan initiated in Wisconsin in which the state aids the county in the upkeep of sanatoria has become exceedingly popular and has been extended to where 15 sanatoria serve 18 counties. This system has proved eminently practical. For each tuberculosis patient cared for at county expense, the state refunds to the county $7 for each week's maintenance, affording an equitable division between the county and the state, and encouraging the counties to provide sanatoria for their own people. If able, a resident of the county is, of course, required to pay the cost of his maintenance at the institution.

Sanatoria have an important mission in presenting facts about this great disease to the people. Through educational work, leaders of these establishments have emphasized that although tuberculosis is very prevalent, it is in the majority of cases self-dom fatal and that mortality rate is not a correct index of the rate of sickness, and furthermore that a case of tuberculosis can not be recognized from the external appearance. The importance of early diagnosis has been continually stressed, as well as the value of periodic physical examinations.

The ideal place to cure tuberculosis is where all the machinery and equipment are provided. This, obviously, is not the home. The entire home program is planned for all the members of the family, those who are sick as well as those who are well. Under these conditions, the patient is constantly tempted to do as the others do, to join in an outing where he should be in bed, to entertain a visitor at the very time he should be resting, to wait on himself rather than impose on some member of the family, to eat what the others have, to close the window if someone present objects to the abundance of fresh air which he requires.

One cannot take the treatment just as well at home, simple though the details of fresh air, rest, and wholesome food may seem. Hence sanatoria are necessary, if for no other reason, to protect the patient from his own folly and the advice of his friends.

At a sanatorium, a patient is taught how to care for himself when he returns home and how to protect others. Climate is often over-estimated as an important factor in the cure of tuberculosis. One can be cured in Wisconsin as in Arizona or Colorado. Usually, the chances for recovery are better close at home, and the treatment certainly is more accessible and less expensive.

Counties with sanatoria include Ashland, Bayfield, Iron, Brown, Eau Claire, Jefferson, Kenosha, La Crosse, Manitowish, Marathon, Milwaukee, Outagamie, Racine, Sheboygan, Waushara, Winnebago, Fond du Lac, and Wausau. The state sanatorium is at Sturgeon, near Wales, and the state camp for convalescents at Tomahawk Lake. Near Superior is a sanatorium for tuberculosis insane. At Madison is an endowed sanatorium and at Stevens Point a private establishment.

It is planned to compete in baseball, track and field events, golf, tennis and

GIRL ALONE

BY ANNE AUSTIN

THIS HAS HAPPENED
SALLY FORD is "farmed out" to CLEM CARSON, prosperous farmer, the summer she is 16, and leaves the state orphanage, the only home she has known since she was four. At the farm she finds a friend in DAVID NASH, student and an athlete. Carson is angered because David prefers the little orphan to his daughter, PEARL. When he makes insulting remarks about Sally, David hits him a terrific blow.

David and Sally run away and join a carnival, David as cook's helper and Sally as "Princess Lalla," crystal gazer.
The midget, "PITTY SING," takes a fancy to Sally and warns her to beware of NITA. Mrs. BYBEE, wife of the carnival owner, promises Sally she will go to Stanton and see if she can find any news about Sally's mother. Sally has told her about her years in the orphanage and that the only information she has about her mother is that she lived in Stanton a long time. Later in the morning when Mrs. Bybee sends for her, she goes with anxious heart.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

As Sally ran across lots to the side-tracked carnival train, she buried her precious new memory of David under layers of anxiety and questions. It would still be there when her questions had been answered by Mrs. Bybee, to comfort her if she showedman's wife had been unsuccessful, to add to her joy if some trace of her mother had been found.

"Maybe—maybe I'll have a mother and a sweetheart, too," she murmured, as she climbed, breathless, into the coach which had been pointed out to her as the showman's private car. It was not really a private car, for Bybee and his wife occupied only one of the drawing rooms of the ancient Pullman car, long since retired from the official service of that company. The berth were occupied on long jumps by a number of the stars of the carnival and by some of the most affluent of the concessionaires and barkers, a few of the latter being part owners of such attractions as the "giraffe show" and the "diving beauties." When the carnival showed in a town for more than a day, however, the performers usually preferred to sleep in tents, rather than in the stuffy, hot berths.

Since the carnival was in full swing at that hour of the day, Sally found the sleeping car deserted except for Mrs. Bybee, who called to her from the open door of drawing room A. The carnival owner's wife was seated at a card table, which was covered with stacks of coins and bills of all denominations. Her lean fingers pushed the stacks about, counted them, jotted the totals on a sheet of lined paper.

"I'm treasurer and paymaster for the outfit," she said, satisfaction glinting in her keen gray eyes. "Me and Bill," and she lifted a big, blue, barreled revolver from the faded green plush of the seat and twirled it unconcernedly on her thumb.

"Is business good?" Sally asked politely, as she edged fearfully into the small room.

"Night be worse," Mrs. Bybee conceded grudgingly. "Sit down child, I'm not going to shoot you. Well, I went sailing this morning, she added brightly, as she began to rake the stacks of coins into a large canvas bag.

"Oh," Sally breathed, clasping her hands tightly in her lap. "Did you—find out anything?"

"Mrs. Bybee knotted a stout string around the gathered-up mouth of the bag, rose from her seat, lifted the green plush cushion, revealing a small safe beneath the seat. When she had stowed the bag away and twirled the combination lock, she rearranged the cushion and took her seat again, all without answering Sally's anxious question.

"Reckon I'm a fool to let anyone see where I keep the coin," she ridiculed herself. "But after making a blamed fool of myself this morning over them dresses your David give you, I guess I'd better try to do something to show you I trust you. You just keep your mouth shut about this safe and there won't be any harm done."

"Of course I won't tell," Sally assured her earnestly. "But, please, did you find out anything?" She felt that she could not bear the suspense a minute longer.

"You let me tell this my own way, child," Mrs. Bybee reproved her. "Well you saw that missionary rig I had on this morning?" It turned the trick all right. Lucky for you, this ain't the fastest growing town in the state, even if that billboard across from the station does say so. I found the address you gave me, all right. Same number, same house. Four-or-five-room dump, that may have been a pretty good imitation of a California bungalow 12 years ago. All rundown now, with a swarm of kids tumbling in and out and sticking out their tongues at me when their ma's back was turned. She said she'd lived there two years; moved here from Wisconsin. Didn't know a soul in Stanton when she moved here and hadn't had time to get acquainted with many of her neighbors, who with a new baby ever 14 months."

"Poor thing!" Sally murmured, finding pity in her heart for the bedraggled draught. Mrs. Bybee's words pictured so vividly. But those too-numerous babies had a mother. What she wanted to know was—did she, Sally Ford, have a mother?

"Then a memory, so long submerged that she did not realize that it existed in her subconscious mind, pushed up, spilled out surprisingly: "There was a big oak tree in the corner of the yard. I used to swing. Someone pushed the swing—someone—" she fumbled for more, but the memory failed.

"It's still there and there's still a swing," Mrs. Bybee admitted. "One of those dirty-faced little brats was climbing up and down the ropes like a monkey. Well, I reckon that's where you used to live, right enough. I asked this woman—name of Likson—if any of her neighbors had lived there many years and she pointed to the house next door and said 'Old Lady Bangs' owned the house and had lived there for more'n 20 years. This old Mrs. Bangs—"

"Bangs!" Sally cried. "Bangs! It was Gramma Bangs who swung me! I remember now! Gramma Bangs. She made me a rag doll with shoe-button eyes and I cried every night for a long time after I went to the orphanage because mama hadn't brought my doll. Did you see Gramma Bangs? Oh, Mrs. Bybee, if I could go to see her again!"

Mrs. Bybee's stern, long-hatched-shaped face had softened marvelously, but at Sally's eager request she shook her head emphatically.

"Not with the police looking for you and Dave. Yes, I saw her. She's all crippled up with rheumatism and was tickled to death to see Nora Ford's sister. That's who I said I was, you know. But it pretty near got me into trouble. The old lady took it for granted I knew a lot of things about you that I didn't know and wouldn't have told me just what I'd come to find out if I hadn't used my bean in stringing her along. I had to go mighty easy asking her about you, since it was my 'sister' I was supposed to be so hot up over finding, but lucky for you she'd been reading the papers and knew that you were in trouble."

"Oh!" Sally moaned, covering her hot face with her little brown-painted hands. "Then Gramma Bangs thinks I'm a bad girl—oh! Did you tell her I'm not?"

"What do you take me for—a blamed fool?" Mrs. Bybee demanded heatedly. "I didn't let on I'd ever seen you in my life. But it was something she let spill when she was talking about you and this story in the papers that gave me the down-down on the whole thing."

"Oh, what?" Sally implored, almost frantic with impatience.

"Well, she said, 'You can't blame Nora for putting Sally in the orphanage when the money stopped coming, seeing as how she was sick and needing an operation and everything. But it pret'near broke her heart—that's what the old dame said—'

"But—I don't understand," Sally protested, her sapphire eyes clouding with bewilderment. "Did she mean my father?"

"I thought that at first, too," Mrs. Bybee nodded her bobbed gray head with satisfaction. "But lucky I didn't say so, or I'd have given the whole show away. I just 'yes, indeed' her, and she went on. Reckon she thought I might be taking exceptions to the way she'd been running on about how pitiful it was for 'that dear little child' to be put in an orphan's home, so she tried to show me that my 'sister' had done the only thing she could do under the circumstances."

"Pretty soon it all came out. 'Nora,' she said, 'told me not to breathe a word to a soul, but seeing as how you're her sister and probably know all about it, I reckon it won't do no harm after all these years.' Then she told me that Nora Ford had no more idea'n a jack rabbit whose baby you was—"

"Then she wasn't my mother!" Sally cried out in such a heartbroken voice that Mrs. Bybee reached across the card table and patted her hands, dirty diamonds twinkling on her withered fingers.

"No, she wasn't your mother," the showman's wife conceded with brusque sympathy. "But I can't see as how it leaves you any worse off than you was before. One thing ought to comfort you—you know it wasn't your own mother that turned you over to an orphanage and then beat it, leaving no address. Seems like," she went on briskly, "from what old lady Bangs told me, that Nora Ford had been hired to take you when she was a maid in a swell home in New York, and she had to beat it—that was part of the agreement—so there never would be any scandal on your real mother. She didn't know whose kid you was—so the old lady says—and when the money orders stopped coming suddenly she didn't have the least idea how to trace your people. She supposed they was dead—and I do, too. So it looks like you'd better make up your mind to being an orphan—"

"But, oh, Mrs. Bybee!" Sally cried piteously, her eyes wide blue wells of misery and shame. "My real mother must have been—bad, or she wouldn't have been ashamed of having me! Oh, I wish I hadn't found out!" And she laid her head down on her arms on the card table and burst into tears.

"Don't be a little fool!" Mrs. Bybee admonished her severely. "Reckon it ain't up to you, Sally Ford, to set yourself up in judgment on your mother, whoever she may have been."

"But she sent me away," Sally sobbed brokenly. "She was ashamed of me, and then forgot all about me. Oh I wish I'd never been born."

"I reckon every kid's said that a hundred times before she's old enough to make good sense," Mrs. Bybee scoffed. "Now, dry up and scoot to the dress tent to put some more make-up on your face. The show goes on. And take it from me, child, you're better off than a lot of girls that join up with the carnival. You're a young and pretty girl, you've got a boy friend that'd commit murder for you and pret' near did it, and you've got a job that gives you a bed and cakes, and enough loose change to buy yourself some glad rags by the time we hit the Big Town—"

"The Big Town?" Sally raised her head, interest dawning unwillingly in her grieving blue eyes. "You mean—New York?"

"Sure I mean New York. We go in to winter quarters there in November, and if you stick to the show, I may be able to land you a job in the chorus. God knows you are pretty enough—just the type to make every six-footer want to fight any other man that looks at you."

"Oh, you're good to me!" Sally blinched away the last of her tears, which had streaked her brown make-up. "I'll stick, if the police don't get me—and David. And," she paused at the door, her eyes shy and sweet, to help me find my mother."

"Thank you so very much for trying to help me find my mother," Sally said, as she sped down the aisle of the car in her noiseless little red sandals. She was startled to see what looked like a sheaf of yellow, dried grass whisked through the closing door of the women's dressing room. Then comprehension dawned. "I wonder," she took time from her contemplation of her desolating disappointment to muse, "what Nita is doing here. I wonder if she followed me—if she heard anything. I wouldn't want Nita to know about my mother. But I'll tell David. Will he despise me because my mother was—bad?"

Nita is plotting some mischief, as Sally finds out later.

Recollections Of Appletonians And Others

SOME "AMUSING" INCIDENTS

BY EDWARD P. HUMPHREY

Sometimes, as Mr. Davy of the Post-Crescent suggested that I write an article about the amusing things that had happened in the office during my connection with the Appleton Post. Many times since then I have cudgeled my brain to recall incidents that would qualify under Mr. Davy's designation, but with little or no success. As I have considerable confidence in the integrity of my memory of those days, I am forced to the conclusion that amusing happenings in the office of the Post, were conspicuously few and far between. Of course this does not apply to Tom Reid's stories, which, when visitors were present, flowed on like the brook, without let or hindrance, and with all the brook's laughing intonations. Aleck Reid also was no slouch as a story teller and the points of his stories usually were more subtle than Tom's. When Dr. Erb, or dry-humored R. M. Lunt or keen-witted Harold Galpin came up to the office, there surely was something doing. But it was noisier when Father Fitzmaurice and Rev. John McCoy happened in at the same time. Just such times as this, I recall, like Pittsburgh chimney's in the mouths of the priest and the pastor and the two Reids, the air became as thick with noisome vapors as the atmosphere of The Pit itself, and forensic and high-pitched debate was likely to ensue. One time, I recall, when Heaven and The Other Place, what I recall most distinctly about these oratorical contests was the booming voice of "Father Fitz" who usually seemed able to talk the others down or at least submerge them beneath the hummers of his more overpowering eloquence. When Father Fitz lifted his chin, fixed his eyes at an angle of about 45 degrees upon a certain point in the ceiling and opened his mouth that little speck wider that we recognized, there was no use in anyone's attempting to stem the flood. It was like the bursting of the great Niagara dam and carried all weaker arguments before it out to the great sea, never to be recognized again. None but his cronies knew what a humorist Harold Galpin was, and he kept it up virulently to his last gasp. When he was in St. Elizabeth Hospital waiting for the end, he used to complain to visiting friends, with a twinkle in his eye, that the heavy cross hanging above the head of his bed, would certainly come down and brain him before he could get away!

BUSINESS WAS "AMUSING" THEN

But perhaps not to disappoint Mr. Davy utterly, it may be possible to define the phrase "amusing things" in such a way as to justify something in the way of an article. Certainly in the light of present practices, the way business used to be done in Appleton thirty-five years ago, is an amusing thing. If "short settlements" make long friends, it is hard to see how the Post and its advertisers in those days remained even on speaking terms. And it must be confessed that frequently when settlements were attempted or actually brought about, the parties to the transaction were nearly at sword's points. In those early days advertisers expected the paper to "trade put" a considerable portion of the year's advertising bill. To accomplish this not only did the owners of the paper run accounts with advertisers but all employees of the paper were expected to accept "an order" upon an advertiser for the amount of one week's wages each month. Of course employees didn't relish this practice but had become more or less used to it. It was easy to keep track of these employees' orders by means of the stubs in the order book, so there was little likelihood of dispute over them, but it was a different story when it came to auditing the bills advertisers turned in against the families of the owners of the paper—when you consider that these bills, without intermediate monthly statements, now run up, frequently without interruption for two or three years. It was impossible to recall many of the items as having been purchased at all and abundant material thereby was furnished for acrimonious disputes between the paper and its advertisers. Such long settlements would be inconceivable now, but then it was the rule rather than the exception for the books of the paper and its advertisers to be squared up no oftener than every two or three years. As I recall it the "record" in this respect went to the account between The Post and Louis Bonini's meat market, (this Louis Bonini being the father of the present Louis Bonini). The Bonini market was located on College Avenue conveniently for Tom Reid to drop in on his way home and select a piece of meat, so Louis Bonini, though somewhat reluctantly was persuaded to "take out an ad." in the paper. Aleck Reid wrote the advertisement, which began "Welcome Announcement, by Louis Bonini," and went on to tell why the announcement was or should be a welcome one to the people of Appleton, namely that this market made available an unusually varied and choice assortment of meats, etc. This advertisement, without change of copy, staid in the paper from year's end to year's end, until the type became almost flattened out and the advertisement itself little better than a blur. I will not attempt to say how many years passed over our heads with their summers' heat and winters' snows, but I hazard six at least, before the day of reckoning came and the welkin rang to the clash of verbal steel. I know the Reid bill at Bonini's market was about as long as Senator Kennedy's historic bill at Shannon's grocery. I presume the disputants finally wearily agreed to let it be a standoff.

A CHANGE COMES

But things took a different turn when The Continental Clothing House opened its store in Appleton some time in the early or middle '90's. The Continental was first to introduce modern methods in merchandising. Up to then when a man wanted to buy a suit of clothes it was expected there would be haggling over the price. The salesman would look at the crying price mark and state the price, the customer would exclaim in horror, the salesman would endeavor to justify himself, the customer would be unconvinced, and so it would go usually until the proprietor himself had been called in to take the responsibility, when generally the price would be "shaded" as a special favor or to "get the sale." The head man at the Continental was "Matt" Mitchell, and as the Continental among other things brought modern advertising methods to Appleton, and Matt was in the office of The Post almost every day with changes of advertising copy, I became very well acquainted with him—in fact considered myself on intimate terms with him. Imagine my surprise therefore the first time I went into the Continental to buy a suit of clothes to find absolutely no response from Matt to my delicate hint that the price seemed a little high. "I'm sorry, Ed," he said, "I would like to favor you, but all our suits are marked in plain figures, which the customer may read for himself, and that and no other is the price at which they are sold, no matter who buys them." Not only did the Continental adhere unvaryingly to the marked price, but it opened no accounts, and did an absolutely cash business—something virtually unheard of before. When I bought that first suit of clothes I assumed that the amount would be charged to me or The Post as an offset against the Continental's advertising account. But Matt disabused my mind of that idea too. "I'm sorry, Ed," he said again, "but I can't charge that to you. If you don't happen to have the price handy, I'll personally lend you the amount, but that's the best I can do." Naturally I dug up the $15 so that a suit of clothes cost in those days. For quite a while the Continental had an interesting time with customers over its one-price and no-credit policies, but it made them stick, and gradually all Appleton businesses came around more or less to a close approximation, greatly to the general benefit.

After the Continental showed us the way, we came to have shorter settlements with Joseph Spitz, Rudolph Schwarz and the others. Even with the Kimberly-Clark Co. for whom we did much job printing and from whom we bought most of our paper, we had yearly settlements, until one morning we received a statement from them with a letter saying they would prefer the account to be paid at once and after that similar bills monthly, and that they would pay correspondingly our bills against them for job work.

WHAT PERSISTENCE WILL DO

Perhaps I cannot better close this article than by telling a story which does not reflect very creditably upon me—at least the "joke" was on me. Probably I should keep this story to myself were it not for the fact that it seems to me to carry a "moral" or lesson which conceivably may prove of real value to some reader disposed to be discouraged about his business accomplishments. One might entitle this story "Constant Dropping Wears Away the Stone." In early years with The Post my duties included the buying of all supplies needed by our business. Youthfully, I sometimes permitted judgment to be swayed by prejudice. Many traveling salesmen called, and I struggled the time I had to give to some of them, and on that account grew critical of their deportment. For instance, I never willingly gave an order to a salesman who entered my office smoking a cigar, (this was before the vogue of cigarettes, though I smoked myself, but never in the office. One day a salesman of an oil company called to sell lubricating oil. He was considerably older than I. Though he was very urbane, I took a senseless dislike to the cut of his job and made short work of him. I told him our presses consumed very little oil, that a barrel of oil lasted us several months, and that we were supplied for an indefinite future period. The salesman politely expressed his regret and departed. This salesman's headquarters were in a neighboring city and he was accustomed to make Appleton every week. From thenceforth, each time he came, he called on me. He came into the office, sat down for five minutes, exchanged the time of day and asked me if I needed any oil. Although there was nothing I could justly charge against him to myself, and his goods and prices were O. K., some perverse crotchets kept me from changing my original attitude. Whenever our supply of oil ran low, I bought of someone else. But in spite of unvarying discouragement this salesman continued to call each week as regularly as Thursday arrived. Gradually the length of each visit shortened. As the months rolled by he reduced his call from five minutes to four, to three, to two. Toward the last he did not sit down but stood in front of my desk. He always asked me courteously if I needed any oil. Finally, after a couple of years, he limited himself to putting his head inside door and saying: "Anything today?" to which I made uniform reply: "Nothing, thank you," whereupon he bowed gravely and softly closed the door.

CUBS LOSE THIRD STRAIGHT AND DROP FROM TOP BERTH

Cincinnati Reds Coast Into First Position As Cardinals Trip Bruins

Yankees Pound Out 22 Hits for Easy Win but Macks Keep Pace in Long Game

The reaction that almost inevitably follows extended winning streaks has struck the Chicago Cubs and forced them from pace-setting position in the National League's wild pennant scramble.

After establishing a season's record for winning streaks when they ran up a string of 13 straight, the Cubs lost their third game in a row Tuesday, St. Louis taking a 3 to 2 decision at the Mound city.

This defeat for the Cubs, coupled with Cincinnati's 5 to 4 victory over Pittsburgh put the Reds back into first place.

Just to make the first division shift complete the New York Giants moved into third place while the Cardinals dropped back to fourth, the intricacies of the percentage system accomplishing this despite the fact that both clubs turned in victories.

The Giants took advantage of their opponent's five errors to beat the Brooklyn Robins, 9 to 5. Vance weakened in the sixth and his support collapsed at the same time.

Brandt gave up but three hits as the Boston Braves repulsed the invading Phillies, 3 to 1. Brandt allowed but one hit until the ninth when Southern hit a home run and Sand singled.

In the American League, the New York Yankees pounded out 22 hits in scoring a 14 to 4 victory over the Boston Red Sox. In the Yanks' hit collection were Ruth's thirteenth home of the season; Gehrig's seventh and Muesel's fourth. In all the Yanks 23 hits were good for 38 bases.

The Philadelphia Athletics traveled 11 innings before they could gain a 7 to 6 verdict over the Washington Senators. Eddie Collins' pinch double in the ninth tied the score and his single in the eleventh scored the winning run.

Jack Ogden was wild and the Detroit Tigers beat the St. Louis Browns, 6 to 2. Ogden forced in two of the four runs the Tigers scored in the first inning. Heilmann accounted for two more in the fifth when he hit for the circuit with Rice on base. The Browns got 13 hits to 7 in the winners.

Mostil scored from second base on a wild pitch by Uble in the eighth inning to give the Chicago White Sox a 4 to 3 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Mostil tied the record for chances accepted by outfielders when he snared 11 flies and made one assist without an error.

BEAT GREEN BAY FOES

Manitowoc — With the triangular meet a nip and tuck affair at the Lincoln high school field here, the Red and White of Manitowoc came along with a rush in the final two events of the day, and with Captain Dick Towlesley and Schreiber leading the way respectively in the 220 yard low hurdles, and the javelin, annexed 10 scored points to finish out in front with 53 1/2 points.

Manitowoc was second with 45 1/2 and East Green Bay third with 40 points. Easily the feature of the afternoon was the work of Schreiber in the closing event of the meet, the javelin. He broke the state high school interscholastic record, by hurling the spear 181 feet 8 1/2 inches, to best Herber in the latter's pet event, and

THREE YOUNGSTERS

STAR IN COAST BALL

Make History While Most Boys of Their Age Still Are in School

San Francisco (AP)—Three youngsters are making history in the Pacific Coast League this season while most boys of their age are still at school.

Frank Crossett, regular third baseman for the San Francisco Seals, is 17 years old and seems destined for stardom. He came into prominence in the winter league, a semi-pro organization, was signed by the Seals and blazed a spectacular trail through the training season, ending up with a firm hold on the "hot corner." He carries a hefty bat, which yields a steady run of extra-base hits.

Glenn Gabler, 18, takes a regular turn in the box for Los Angeles. He throws right handed and his effective relief hurling makes critics believe he is one of the best pitching prospects ever picked up by a coast league club. Gabler is a product of Long Beach High School.

Another 18-year-old who has won his spurs in the heat of a season's campaign is William Brenzel, catcher for the San Francisco Missions. Brenzel jumped from an Oakland high school to a Class AA uniform in 1927. While he sees only occasional service, his owners predict a bright future for him and are content to let him develop slowly.

three Badger teams away from home. Guy Lowman's ball nine will hold forth at Camp Randall. Local fans will be offered a great attraction as the Badgers are expected to play the Cardinals in the first division. At least four tennis players will be sent to Purdue. The Badgers should give a good account of themselves with their clean slate in dual matches as a back-sword.

Coach Leith has not made his final decision on the Wisconsin entries in the golf tourney. It is possible, however, that no Wisconsin golfers will tie-off at Columbus this week, when the Big Ten mashie artists assemble.

VIKING STARS IN LITTLE FOUR MEET

Supporting Captains Doug and Don Hyde, expected to be Lawrence's highest point scorers in the big contest, in the effort of Lawrence college's track and field squad to capture the first annual Wisconsin Intercollegiate Athletic Association, are several athletes who while not so brilliant are consistent place-winners. Included in the men expected to add to the Viking total in the effort to win the championship are the three men pictured above, Charles Wolf, Shorewood, consistent point-winner in the mile and two-mile, Arthur Mueller, Wausau, two-miler and Olin Jessup, Marshfield, discus and weight man. Other Viking stars include Menning, miler and half-miler; Pope and Brus-sal, sprinters; Ellis, Jumps; Ott and Molins, weights. The first annual meet of the new conference will be held here Saturday afternoon at Whit-field.

APPLETON CINDER STARS IN LEADING EVENTS SATURDAY

Vikings Host to Little Four Colleges; Orange in Valley Meet at Ship City

Both Lawrence college and Appleton high school track and field teams face this Saturday the most important contests of the 1928 season, the events for which every other earlier meet has been mere preliminary training, and chances of both for championships seem bright, especially the groups The Vikings are host to the first annual meet of the newly-organized Wisconsin Intercollegiate Athletic Association at Whitfield field and have hopes of being first track champion of the new association as well as winners of the first official title of the group.

Appleton high school travels to Manitowoc to defend its Fox River Valley conference championship of 1927 and it will present a very well-balanced squad in defense of the crown. With Capt. Johnston in form, Appleton is favored to repeat its 1927 title as its list of other first, second and third place winners is strong.

Three of the boys being likely first place winners and at least six others assured of seconds, thirds or fourths which count greatly in a meet in which eight strong teams are competing and each has a few sure firsts to split the "point" winners.

The Orange is a favorite because of its season's record. It beat Manitowoc, the next strongest school, in a dual meet, won the special honors in the Valley relay carnival, beside winning one relay and placing in all other events, scored 19 1/2 points against Milwaukee's best athletes here last week. Manitowoc and East and West Green Bay will furnish the strongest competition for the local boys.

Ripon is a slight favorite for the Little Four bunting, with Lawrence and Carroll as dark-horses. The Vikings, with the Hyde twins, Menning, Wolf and a few others running in form may pile up enough counters to squeeze out a victory with the points split four ways, but the final result, no matter who wins will be close. Lawrence is extremely weak in the last event, Both the Orange and Viking relay teams are favored to win that event at their respective meets.

CISSELL THINKS MAJOR LOOP EASY

Faced Tougher Hurling in Minors Than in Major Leagues

Chicago (AP)—Cavalryman Bill Cissell, the $125,000 White Sox shortstop, contents that it is easier to play in the big time than in the minor leagues.

"I've faced tougher pitchers than these in the big leagues many a time," he said. He seems to be proving his statement. In the minors the former U. S. cavalryman was considered only an average hitter.

Since Ed Walsh took the hitch out of his batting form in spring training games, Cissell has been hitting the ball well above the .300 mark. He hit in 14 consecutive games, failed to connect in the fifteenth game and then the following day continued his hitting bee. Manager Ray Schalk has raised him from seventh place in the batting column to lead off man.

Drivers' Battle May Cause Broken Mark At Car Races

New York (AP)—It may not be of startling concern to the average motorist whether or not he has a front or rear wheel drive but this mechanical issue happens to be vital just now to a dozen or two speed kings who will match their dare-deviltry and speed in the 500-mile International Sweepstakes at Indianapolis on Memorial day.

The argument between the rival camps is so hot that it likely will result in a record-breaking race for the premier long distance honors of American tracks.

Steve Hannegan, who does light and heavy experting in motorboats and automobiles, admits he was there when they built the Indianapolis speedway. As Carl Fisher's energetic agent, he has heard the motors roar ever since. He concentrates on the speed demons only as relaxation between responsibilities as director of public relations for Gene Tunney.

"The Indianapolis race this year will be a great battle between the front and rear wheel drive boys," says Steve. "The betting is more on a basis of which shows up the best than on which will win. The front-wheel drive pilots are betting they will tear off the fastest trials and thus get the front positions in the starting line-up but the rear-wheel boys are wagering they will be out in front before the first five-mile lap is completed.

CORNELL SHIFTS LUCK It may or may not turn out to be a good omen but Cornell, in the rowing doldrums since the days of old man Courtney, has drawn the rabbit's foot—No. 2—for the varsity race in the Poughkeepsie regatta this year. Legend for years has favored the crews drawing this lane although it is more a case of superstition than fact.

Pennsylvania had the No. 2 lane in the varsity race last year and finished so far in the rear that watchers feared the Quakers were lost or sunk. Columbia, the 1927 winner, had the No. 6 lane, and this year has drawn No. 7, out near the middle of the Hudson river.

The record entry of 20 crews in the Poughkeepsie classic, June 19, testifies to the intense interest in rowing this year, with the Olympics as an added incentive to bring on the best that the colleges can produce.

NEW DISCUS STAR Just when America begins to get a bit complacent about the skill of her track and field talent some star in Germany bobs up to give the Yankee confidence a jolt.

Now it is the discus record. America has had to share some of the honors in plate-tossing to the Finns in years past but Hoffmeister of Hanover has outdone anything in the record achievements of the two American aces, Houser and Hartman, with a toss of 159 feet, 4 1/2 inches.

Smith, helmsman of the Kaukauna club, is hitting the ball at a merry clip this season. He had a perfect day at bat against Crowe and Refke, of Appleton. He is crushing the horsehide at a .500 clip and three of his half dozen swats have been of the four-base distance variety.

This appears to be a great year for the Smiths in the Valley loop. Len Smith, the Kim-Little Chute gardener collected a double, triple and a pair of singles in the game with Nee-Menasha. Smith is hitting a bit higher than his Kaukauna namesakes and besides he has scored nine runs in 3 games.

Paris, one of the mainstays of the Fond du Lac club, continues to hold his own as an outfielder. The veteran has put on a bit of weight but he still packs a sound wallop with the plate. Paris knows the Valley league play or like a book and this makes some of his hard chances look easy.

INDIANA LOSES SECOND Chicago (AP)—Indiana's hopes for second place in the Big Ten baseball race were shattered when Chicago nosed out an 11 to 9 victory after a slugfest.

New York (AP)—K. O. Phil Kaplan, New York, defeated Pinky Mitchell, Milwaukee disqualified (4.) Paul Bernbach, New York, won a technical knockout over Larry Estrada, New York (7.)

GRAHAM, SCHWARTZ TO CLASH IN TITLE BOUT

New York (AP)—With recognition as bantamweight champion awaiting the winner, Bushy Graham, Spidery-legged Utica, N. Y., Battler and Izzy Schwartz, state flyweight titleholder, clash over the 15-round route at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, Wednesday night.

Holding a decisive edge physically, Graham was an odds-on favorite to batter his tiny rival into defeat and win recognition as king of the 115-pounders from the National Boxing Association and the New York State Athletic commission.

Why regular calls at this Sign save money.

Ten-minute monthly inspection at the Exide Service Station will mean longer and better service from your battery . . .

BATTERIES are like teeth—you will get longer and better service out of them if they are inspected regularly by an expert.

Give your battery only ten minutes a month at an Exide Service Station. That's all it needs. Just long enough to let the Exide Service man test the voltage, and see if you need distilled water, or grease on the terminals.

It is a trifling bit of work, but you have no idea what a difference it will make in the long run. Regular care by a battery expert will often add as much as 25 per cent to the life of a battery. And think what a saving that would mean to you!

Look for the Exide sign

You can always be sure of expert service at an Exide Station. No matter what make of battery you have, it will pay you to call regularly at the Exide sign.

Get into the habit of stopping there once a month. It takes so little time—just about long enough to smoke a cigarette—yet it will save real money in battery costs.

MAJOR LEAGUES AFTER TWO UNIVERSITY STARS

Chicago—(AP)—Two University of Chicago baseball players have been offered tryouts with major league clubs.

Pittsburg and Brooklyn think Capt. Kyle Anderson, a second baseman is worth signing, while the Dodgers have offered Priess, outfielder and leading hitter of the Western Conference, a tryout at the end of the Big Ten season.

BREWERS SLUG WAY INTO FIRST PLACE

Batter Two St. Paul Hurlers for 17 Hits to Replace Rivals

Chicago—(AP)—Undisputed leadership of the American Association Wednesday was held by Milwaukee—the first time this season. The Brewers have led the circuit's pennant race.

The climb to the top round of the percentage ladder came about Tuesday when the Brewers fell on two Saint pitchers for 17 hits to win 12 to 4. It was the second consecutive defeat handed the former league leaders by Jack Lelivelt's outfit and marked the decline of the Saints to second place in the standings.

Minneapolis tightened its hold on third place, when the fast shipping Kansas City Blues were again defeated, this time 4 to 2.

Casey Muddens were right again and Toledo won its tenth straight game, defeating Louisville, 13 to 6, in the series opener. The slugging Muddens counted 15 safeties.

Indianapolis opened a long home stand by bunting hits in four innings to trounce Columbus, 12 to 3. Levitt, Indian hurler, was the only tribesman that failed to get a hit.

Earl Sande, America's premier sprinter, was given a chance to earn $35,000 for a little over two minutes riding in the Kentucky Derby but turned it down.

The owners of Marty Flynn, a Derby candidate, offered him a flat fee of $5,000 to ride the colt and one-half of the purse if he brought him in the winner and the race probably will be worth $60,000. Sande said in turning down the offer, he had to remain in the east to ride for his employer, Joseph L. Widener.

Trial heats in all events except the distance runs are to be held Friday, with finals Saturday.

The century will bring together seven sprinters who have done better than 10 seconds and who are candidates for the Olympic team. Winners of first and second place qualify for the Olympic finals at Harvard. Topping the group is George Simpson of Ohio State. He won the event at the Penn relays in less than 10 flat and stepped the distance at the Ohio Relays in 39 3/5. # QUESTION OF FINANCE FACES COUNTIES WITH BIG CUTOVER TRACTS

Question Must Be Solved
Some Time but All Hesitate to Take Initiative

Ashland—(P)—With approximately 192,000 acres of wild land within its borders, upon which no taxes are being paid, Ashland-co. faces a problem in utilizing delinquent cut-over land, said a summary by the Ashland Daily Press issued today.

"The country and the various towns in the country are doomed to face and must meet some serious financing questions," the review said.

But one thing concerning this large acreage is fortunate, this being the fact that the largest part of the lands delinquent are of poor quality, of low value and are generally unfit for agricultural purposes. Consequently the percentage of delinquent taxes is not as large as the percentage of lands delinquent. The major portion of these lands will be of use only in reforestation projects, and in fact the largest share of the acreage should be drawn from the market, so that new settlers coming into the districts in which these lands are located will not be forced to settle on them, but will be given an opportunity of locating on the good lands, advantageously situated near schools and markets and on established highways," the paper's summary declared.

"Private ownership is the thing to be sought, although reforestation projects will not become profitable until these lands are protected from fire. With present law and an adequate fire protection these lands could be held profitably. It will be necessary for the state to assist in establishing fire protection however."

"Reward for proper conservation policies will not be far distant, and will be realized in but a short time if only the fire hazard is lessened. A vast acreage of land in Ashland county is covered with a good growth of trees which in a few years will supply box wood, pulp wood and ties, if allowed to grow. And this in turn will be followed, if there is protection, by large forests of mature timber. The present stand of merchantable timber of about 60,000 acres is negligible by year if the young trees can be given a chance to grow."

More than one third of the land in the county is unfit for agriculture and can be used for reforestation. The new Forest Crop Law is expected to be of great assistance in getting land under reforestation principles. Thus far in Ashland county there are about $2,000 acres of land waiting to be entered under the new law. Application has been made for entry of this land, which is in the southern part of the county, and there is to be a hearing on the applications soon.

What D'ya Think About These Students' Report?

Madison—(P)—A coed's mentality is inversely proportional to her physical beauty, according to one of the 47 tenets in a Wisconsin Credo of beliefs prevalent among the student body at the University of Wisconsin.

Peter Seidlin, a freshman, and Dan Albrecht, a journalism senior, compiled the list. They claim "neither infallibility nor completeness in their compilation. Some tenets may be frankly incorrect in that they are not held by a large enough number of students to justify their inclusion in the Credo."

The authors further state that a belief should not be assumed false merely because it is included in the Credo. Here are a few requirements of the things brought out in the article.

The University of Wisconsin has the strictest scholastic requirements of any university in the middle or far west.

BROTHERS COMBINED EFFORTS IN EARNING BOTH FAME, FORTUNE

Fisher Brothers Came to Detroit from Fathers Smithy at Norwalk, Ohio

Detroit—(P)—This is the story of the Brothers Fisher—a round half dozen of them—a family of American industry that laid the foundation in a country blacksmith shop for its present fabulous fortune.

The Fisher name rolls along the streets of the universe on motor car bodies, but the tale of how the six sons of Lawrence Fisher, wagon maker and blacksmith of Norwalk, Ohio, put it there is a story almost untold because of a reluctance of the Fisher brothers to receive personal attention.

Fred J., Charles T. and William A. Fisher, the three elder brothers, count their personal wealth at from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 each. Lawrence P., Edward F. and Alfred J. estimate their assets at a comfortable number of millions.

Like the sons of poor men and princes in story books, the Fisher brothers began a little more than a score of years ago to leave the parental home to seek their fortunes.

One would carve a niche, another would come on to take a place by the side of the first one and thus they made their way together.

In 1902 Fred Fisher came to Detroit, where his uncle, Albert Fisher, had been building carriage bodies for several years. He had worked with the Wilson Body company for a year when Charles W. Fisher joined him.

Fred and Charles then developed the idea that was to revolutionize the body building industry—quantity production of interchangeable parts from a set of patterns.

In 1908 the Fisher Body company was organized with $50,000 capital. Albert Fisher was the first president, but the brothers soon bought him out. As a Fisher boy got old enough to leave the Norwalk home, he came on and took his place in the outfit. It wasn't long until the clan was at the head of the body building industry.

A seventh brother, Howard, 27, now is gradually working his way upward through the ranks in the office of the elder brothers.

It's all in the family with the Fishers. No question of moment is decided unless it is submitted to a brotherly forum. They protest, even, at the listing of their names out of the proper age order.

In 1909 and 1910 Fred Fisher began

NAME IS FAMILIAR TO AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

From their father's smithy and carriage shop at Norwalk, Ohio, six Fisher brothers have come to Detroit since 1902 to found a family fortune and make the name famous in the automotive field. They are shown above in order of age and the order of their migration from Norwalk: Fred, Charles and William above; Lawrence, Edward and Alfred below.

to talk of the future of the closed body. He was scoffed at by automobile manufacturers. People, they said, will never ride behind so much glass. But the Fisher Body Corporation was organized in 1916 and it employs 50,000 men today.

General Motors bought a controlling interest in the concern in 1919. Fred J., Lawrence P. and William A. Fisher became officers of the General Motors organization and Charles T. became an executive committee member.

In recent years the Fisher brothers, especially Fred and Charles, have branched out in their activities. Lawrence is president of the Cadillac Motor company. William is president of the Fisher company and Alfred and Edward are vice presidents. Banks and railroads have attracted investments by the brothers and lumber mills and others which feed the Fisher factories have been bought into by some of the sextet.

Fishing, Shooting O. K. But Golf Is Another Problem

Madison—(P)—Wisconsin's commissioner of insurance, Milton A. Freedy, likes fishing and now that he has taken it up, hunting, but golf—well may be.

Coming to Madison to take up the insurance post in 1927, Mr. Freedy recognized the handiness of two lakes that bound the city so he brought rod and reel along. And he used them to advantage. When the day's worry with the insurance matters, figures, regulation of companies and all that, had been done the commissioner would head for a boat on Mendota. His office force learned of this recreation and a friendly rivalry sprung up. Finally Mr. Freedy awarded a handsome "state insurance department head fisherman certificate," properly embossed with seal and all to one of the men.

But a few weeks later the commissioner landed one just a few ounces heavier and withdrew the commission from his lieutenant.

Then the duck season came along and the men who knew of Mr. Freedy's love of the outdoors asked him if he could shoot. He informed them that he was willing to learn, but had had little experience with a gun. They loaned him one. They set up condensed milk cans. He filled them with shot at a few feet, at several yards, at a great distance and he left six pellets in the can that was placed at some distance.

"No he can't shoot—not much," they cried.

He took to the duck hunting like the ducks took to the water.

So last Christmas the department employees, admirers of their boss, presented him with what he calls "one of the finest shot guns I've ever seen."

But as to golf? A friend of the commissioner's talking with him some time ago, said he had a set of clubs he wouldn't use this summer and asked Mr. Freedy if he'd keep them. The commissioner assented. The clubs came the other day and are sitting in a corner of the commissioner's office.

"They look like nice clubs," said the commissioner, who has had little experience at the now-near national pastime. "Golf is good sport, but so are fishing and hunting."

"I don't know."

LEGION WOMEN TOLD OF NECESSITY FOR PREPARING FOR WAR

Should Not Wait Until Time Arrives, Schneller Tells Ninth District Group

Kaukauna—A successful conference of the American Legion auxiliary of the Ninth district was held Tuesday in the K. of C. club rooms and adjoining halls. The register board showed 137 out of town delegates and guests attended the meeting. Algoma was awarded the fall conference.

The principal speaker of the conference was Col. F. J. Schneller, Neenah, state commander of the American Legion. His subject was "National Defense." "In times of peace prepare for war," was the gist of his talk. Although a peace loving man, the Neenah colonel said he did not believe this country should wait until war is declared to train men who should be doing so all the time. "I do not want to convey the opinion that I am in favor of war, decidedly the opposite, but I do believe that we should train our young men of today and the future so that when there is war it will take but a couple of months extensive training to have them ready. Young boys are the ones to develop. Reports on the draft of the last war showed that nine out of every ten rejected by the draft boards were physically unfit. This is a serious problem and worthy of the attention of everyone. There isn't any organization doing better and greater work to help develop mankind than the boy scouts. And this year the American Legion is to sponsor a greater boy scout program in the state. Present plans call for organization of athletic teams in each community and elimination contests for the state and district championship. You will hear more of this soon from your own local post."

The presentation and greeting was made by Mrs. McCoy Sparta, first vice president of the state. She substituted for Mrs. J. N. Hills, Milwaukee, president of the state organization, who was unable to be in Kaukauna because of the serious illness of her husband. Miss Betty Biese, president of the local unit, welcomed the delegates and guests to Kaukauna. Mrs. W. C. Sullivan, who was to officially welcome the guests to this city did not appear. The response to the address of welcome was given by Mrs. King of Green Bay, past president of the district.

Miss Cora Brown of Milwaukee, state secretary, discussed the forthcoming poppy drive and anti activities against the Klu Klux Klan. She was elected to the state committee. It was the first time that the state secretary had ever attended a conference in the ninth district. Several musical numbers were presented by the high school band and a vocal solo was sung by Mrs. Gerard Brenzel. A recitation, "Who's Afraid," was given by Miss Margaret Fargo. The singing of colors was done by Mrs. George Dogot and Miss Blanche Gerend with the assistance of the high school band. A banquet was served in Eagles' hall at 12 o'clock by women of St. Mary Catholic church.

A set of four resolutions was drawn up by the delegates. The first was to thank the Kaukauna unit for the splendid conference; secondly, to thank the Kaukauna post of the American Legion for the floral decorations; thirdly, to thank the women of St. Mary Catholic church for the banquet and last, to thank the Kaukauna high school band for its program of music and to urge further support of that worthy organization. The Legion auxiliary conference is the first meeting in the city to which the high school band has been invited.

A goal of one auxiliary member for every Legion member was announced at the conference.

Delegates and guests at the session were: Mrs. Arthur De Myser, Mrs. Walter Bie, Mrs. Mary King and Mrs. Nauth of Green Bay, Mrs. Drecker of Kell, Mrs. Leo Gannon, Mrs. George Shequin, Mrs. E. RAILROAD DIVISION MEN IN ASSOCIATION TO BOOST ATHLETICS

Hold Meeting at Kaukauna and Select Heads for Various Activities

Kaukauna—Kaukauna will be one of the competing centers of the newly organized athletic association of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, which was started at a meeting of about forty officials and employees of the division in the lobby of the Kaukauna Y. M. C. A. on Monday afternoon. Similar organizations have been started throughout the entire system.

In speaking of the organization, John Leppla, division superintendent, said: "With the growing interest in athletics generally, there seems to be a demand for an opportunity for employees of various divisions and departments of the Northwestern system to indulge their athletic hobbies or specialties in competition with other divisions, departments and railroads."

"Our president has recognized the value of these athletic interests to the employees individually and these values are also recognized by other associations including the Union Pacific, Rock Island, Pennsylvania and New York Central. Some of them have made considerable progress in the development of competition both team and individual, as well as between railroads."

"An international railway athletic league has now been formed and our president has authorized our joining it. With this in view a Chicago and Northwestern System Athletic association has been formed by adoption of a system board of managers, as follows: president, George Vilas; vice president, Frank Ventner, Jr.; secretary, Howard Lamm and treasurer, Charles Westbrook.

Now the divisions are being organized and the following men on the Ashland division have been placed in charge of the various activities: baseball, Frank Lynde; track and field, Harry Mott; football, tennis, Cliff Williams of Antigo; golf, L. B. Dodge of Antigo; swimming, Otto Husemeyer of Antigo; trapshooting, A. Scheweide of Antigo and music, Charles W. Clark of Kaukauna. Later in the year chairmen will be named for women's activities, boxing, wrestling, hand ball, and checkers but for now the most important one will be baseball.

Teams will be formed at Kaukauna, Antigo, Ashland and Ironwood, Mich. Elimination contests will be held at each center the early part of June and the winners will compete for the division championship. Antigo later in the month. On July 4 the winner of the Ashland division will meet the winner of the Peninsula division at either Antigo or Escanaba and the victor will be champion of the north district. This team will go to Chicago to compete for system honors and the winner will eventually meet the Union Pacific champion team in an inter-system game.

A booster meeting is to be held at the Kaukauna Tourist park within the next few days to stir up enthusiasm.

The Truck Driver

I believe Champion is the better spark plug because of the way Champions stand up in hard truck service.

Champion is the better spark plug because it has an exclusive sillimanite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. Also a new patented solid copper gasket-seal that remains absolutely gas-tight under high compression. Special analysis electrodes which assure a fast spark gap under all driving conditions.
